Target practice relieves stress

United Press International BAYTOWN — Teachers in Baytown's public schools have begun a stress relief program which includes jogging, swimming, aerobic dancing and learning how to shoot a gun.

No data has been tabulated on absenteeism or health costs at Ross S. Sterling High School, but principal Ed Wachtel said teachers seem much more optimistic, energetic and exuberant in the classroom since enrolling in the program.

Target practice seems to be the most popular activity teachers choose for stress relief, Wachtel said.

"Teachers are next to test pilots as far as day to day stress is concerned," said Wachtel, a former physical education teacher.

"It is pretty stressful these days for educators if they really care about kids," said Curtis Herring, assistant superintendent of Baytown schools.

UAW delegates debate current voting system

United Press International DALLAS — Leon Garrison of Kirksville, Mo., says it would cost too much to allow each of the 1.2 million members of the United Auto Workers to vote for top officers, but Joe Kiriaki of Racine, Wis., thinks it's time for a change.

Delegates vociferously debated an attempt by disgruntled workers to change the union's constitution from the present convention system. In the end, the union's leadership had more than enough support to retain the old method.

Currently, the union's 26 member executive board picks a slate of candidates who are later rubber stamped by the full convention. Only once, in 1946, has a grass-roots movement been successful in overturning the top leadership slate. That year, the late Walter Reuther was elected president.

Garrison said he was a small local who was not a voice in the election process — "one-man, one vote" system used.

"If we change the system going to cost too much more time and mileage," said Garrison. "If we change, it is going to cost too much more time and mileage, but the ones with money will vote for the small ones. Our system worked so far and let's let that way."

Kiriaki said the retirement of current President Douglas M. Reuther in the 1930s — the union must change its system at the end of the Reuther era.

"With Fraser's retirement, Kiriaki. "With the honest credibility of Reuther, an attempt would have worked, now changes are coming. We need a new system."

Hair care expenses increasing

United Press International JERICHO, N.Y. — Americans have more than tripled their expenditures on hair care in the decade between 1972 and 1982. They spent a total of $1 billion last year alone.

A study commissioned by CutCo Industries, Inc., a manufacturer of hair care centers, showed women go to salons 8.8 times a year, and men, 6.1 times a year. Men spend an average of $9 per visit, compared with $15 for services of a barber.

The study also showed a man's haircut costs about $4.70 at a salon with male clients only, compared with $7.90 at a mixed salon.

Women spend an average $14.10 on a typical salon visit, the study showed.

The survey said Texas has the most salons — 16,100.
