Breast surgery too much

United Press International
GALVESTON — An Alvin woman has filed suit against a team of plastic surgeons, claiming they completely removed her breasts instead of slightly reducing them as planned.

Judy Cokes, an Alvin housewife, said in her lawsuit that a team of doctors at the University of Texas Medical Branch in Galveston assured her they would reduce the size of her breasts to a "C" cup during surgery.

Instead, Cokes' lawsuit filed Thursday said the operation resulted in the complete removal of her breasts and a considerable amount of scarring.

The woman's lawyer, A.B. Crowther Jr., said his client's personal physician recommended she have the surgery to relieve back pain.

Named as defendants were Dr. Steven Maxwell, of Galveston, director of UTMB's plastic surgery department; Dr. Emmanuel Amayo, who now has a practice in Birmingham, Mich.; and Dr. Joseph Alsop, of Galveston.

"Had you not succeeded, we would have been the failures," Black said.

Boys Town graduates girls

United Press International
BOYS TOWN, Neb. — The first girls to graduate from the famous Boys Town started 65 years ago by Msgr. Edward Flanagan are "a start, not a token," the school's executive director says.

The Rev. Robert P. Hupp admitted the first girl to Boys Town in 1979 — amid some criticism from supporters — as part of a short-term evaluation program that eventually developed into long-term placement.

"They were nothing but trouble when they came here," Hupp said Sunday. "Today gives us something to be proud of."

Hupp said during the graduation exercises, "These are the first five graduates of both our school and our residential program on our campus."

Hupp told the graduation audience having girls at the home "is not a novel idea by any means." He quoted Flanagan as saying in a 1943 letter, "There's no such thing as a bad boy or a girl."

Prior to Sunday, Hupp said Boys Town had 18 girls living in group homes on the campus, six in a juvenile cottage in Omaha and 159 in Boys Town's cooperative youth care facilities across the country.

Hupp said admitting girls has raised some eyebrows among veteran Boys Town supporters, "but when I asked them what they would do if they had a daughter in the same position, it sort of calms them down."

Flanagan started Boys Town 65 years ago with borrowed money and three boys from a juvenile court and two homeless newspaper carriers.

Education Director Donald D. Black told the graduates Boys Town's academic program is a "Cadillac in the midst of obsolete Studebakers."

Leaders gratify Reagan with missile statement

United Press International
WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — President Reagan Monday was described as gratified that leaders of the other major industrial powers set aside their economic differences long enough to endorse his stance on intermediate-range missiles.

The allies, in a statement issued Sunday evening after 3½ hours of discussion, warned Moscow against "attempts to divide the West" and expressed willingness to negotiate "meaningful arms reductions."

In a further show of support for Reagan's defense policies, they vowed to "maintain sufficient military strength to deter any attack."

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan, who Monday presided over the final session of the Economic Summit, was "very pleased" by the statement.

"It was a very strong statement," he said. "We think it's significant. This is the first time this group has endorsed such a statement and the first time France and Japan, who are not NATO members, have joined in such a statement."

The statement was issued after several hours of private talks in which European leaders put pressure on the president to change his economic policies to reduce huge budget deficits and high interest rates.

"We are ready to work with the Soviet Union to this purpose and call upon the Soviet Union to work with us," the leaders said.

But the statement read by Secretary of State George Shultz, flanked by the foreign ministers of France, Britain, Italy, West Germany, Canada and Japan, warned Moscow:

"As leaders of our seven countries, it is our first duty to defend the freedom and justice on which our democracies are based. To this end, we shall maintain sufficient military strength to deter any attack, to counter any threat and to ensure the peace."

Beneath this show of unity were signs of lingering disagreements over arms control and suggestions Reagan might use the statement to divert attention from disputes at the summit over key economic issues.

French Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson said he and President Francois Mitterrand wanted the statement held until Monday, at the conclusion of the summit. The U.S.-orchestrated timing, he said, was "a mystery."

"We did not want this issue to eclipse the economic measures," Cheysson said. "We didn't want this to be the first news to come out of the summit that should be dealing with economic issues."

The allies declared they are "united in efforts for arms reductions" and expressed the "strong wish" an intermediate-range nuclear missile agreement with the Soviets could be reached soon.

It said deployment by NATO of 464 U.S. cruise and 108 Pershing-2 nuclear missiles will take place on schedule — beginning in December — if talks fail.

"The security of our countries is indivisible and must be approached on a global basis," the statement said. "Attempts to avoid serious negotiation by seeking to influence public opinion in our countries will fail."

The statement echoed Reagan's rejection of Soviet demands that 162 French and British missiles be counted as part of the NATO arsenal in the Geneva talks on intermediate-range missiles.

"Attempts to divide the West by proposing inclusion of the deterrent forces of third countries, such as those of France and the United Kingdom, will fail," the statement said. "Consideration of these systems has no place in the INF negotiations."

The smartest move you can make.

Rooster silence by surgery

United Press International
SALT LAKE CITY — Hank Hathaway says a delicate operation will help him get around a noise ordinance banning roosters from inside the city limits because of their early morning cock-a-doodle-dos.

Hathaway obtained the Aracana rooster for his flock of 17 hens. But the law has forced him to keep the bird on a Murray, Utah, farm because its crowing violates the city's noise statute. Chickens, which do not crow, are not affected.

"I've enlisted the help of the University of Utah baseball team to take the rooster to Fort Collins, Colo., where a veterinarian will perform an experimental operation to remove its vocal cords," Hathaway said.
