Burning embers

Firefighters douse the remains of a blaze which broke out Friday afternoon at 1810 Leona Drive in College Station. The origin of the blaze is unknown. Owners of nearby homes watered their roofs down to prevent sparks from the blaze igniting the wood-shingle roofs.

A hospital spokesman said the crash occurred in a practice flight. The pilot of an "experimental" volkswagen-powered airplane was seriously injured Saturday when the aircraft plunged to the ground in a practice flight.

"This was the first time gentlemen had flown it. He got off, made one large circle the field and came back around and made one pass over the field and hollered that everything was fine and he was having good time," Connor said.
