Bryan Council discusses city improvement projects

by Jennifer Carr

The Bryan City Council discussed capital improvement needs for the city and appointed an 18-member committee to study those needs in its meeting at the Bryan Utilities Building Monday night.

Council members considered each major improvement project, many of which were proposed in previous studies and plans, as they were outlined by city manager Earnest Clark and various office heads.

Projects discussed included the current water network analysis study, drainage, road repair, traffic and building needs.

The water network analysis planned for several water lines to be installed over the next four years as well as a million gallon elevated water storage tank.

A drainage project called for the replacement of a 42 inch storm sewer which caused the collapse of Coulter Road.

Traffic improvements included repairing 20 to 30 streets per year and upgrading traffic signals so the central business district would meet state and national standards.

Along with these repairs, Clark said $4.5 million would be needed to build a new city hall along with $2 million for law enforcement buildings. He said a study would be needed to determine whether it would be more cost-efficient to build a new city hall or renovate the current hall.

The total cost for all projects considered was approximately $66 million.

Members of the 18-member capital improvement committee appointed by Bryan mayor Ron Blatchley to study the projects were Frank W.R. Hubert, chairman; Switzer Deaman, represented the Bryan Chamber of Commerce; Eagle John Williams; Marlene representing the League Women Voters; Kenny representing the Bryan Planning Commission and members Carey Callahan, Bookman Peters.

Committee members appointed by council include Dr. Newton Elland Winder, Edward A. Zak Grays, William D. Bill Thornton Sr., Fred Billy Pickard, Isabel Julia Herrera, Hubert and Dr. Clifford Simms.

White signs $30.9 billion budget, sans teacher raises

United Press International AUSTIN — With a word of praise for lawmakers, Gov. Mark White has signed into law a $30.9 billion "tight" state budget that does not contain the money he wanted for teacher pay raises.

"On the whole, the Legislature managed to continue essential services within estimated revenues," he said Sunday night. "As a result, I agree with their decisions to a greater extent than any governor for some time."

White altered the final budget only slightly, vetoing a line item $500,000 appropriation for a feasibility study for a new branch of the University of Houston near Houston.

The governor said the construction of a new university in the Woodlands area of Harris County would hinder efforts to bolster predominantly black Prairie View A&M University. In his veto message, White noted that the enhancement of Prairie View was one of the commitments the state made in its plan to end all vestiges of racial segregation in Texas' colleges and universities.

The plan was approved last week by the U.S. Education Department.

White also said he was disappointed the Legislature did not provide capital construction funds he sought for another mostly black school, Texas Southern University. The governor said he had supported an appropriation of $13.7 million for major repair and renovation at Texas Southern, but lawmakers failed to include it in the budget.

For that reason, White announced he would ask the Legislature to consider $16 million in new construction funds for Texas Southern during the Special Session. The Legislature will convene Wednesday for a special session to revive the state's brucellosis control program and extend the life of the Texas Employment Commission.

White said he had already received pledges of support from Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and House Speaker Gib Lewis for the Texas Southern funding.

Even though the Legislature failed to approve a revenue plan for teacher pay raises, said lawmakers wrote a bill that still addressed critical needs.

"Their job was extremely difficult, and they deserve thanks of all Texans," he

Before the budget was approved, he noted, he estimates from comptroller Bullock were whittled to $1 billion mainly because of oil-related tax dollars.

White is expected to second special session next year to consider an education package containing raises. The governor is also the results of a study by a select committee created Legislature.

Parade celebrates Gay Pride Week

United Press International DALLAS — Police said a record turnout of 4,500 people attended a Mardi Gras-style parade celebrating the beginning of Dallas Gay Pride Week.

"What this shows is that the number of gays coming out of the closet is growing rapidly each year," said Joe Murray, spokesman for the Dallas Gay Pride Association. "This is the largest public turnout for gays ever in Dallas."

The parade Sunday attracted gay rights supporters from Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas and featured all the revelry of a major celebration: marching bands, baton twirlers and floats.

As the parade wound its way through Oak Lawn — heart of Dallas' large gay community — people aboard the floats to-sed out moments. Dallas said about 4,500 attendees prepared to an estimated $1 million previous year.

"The theme of the parade, 'Marching Out of Obscurity Into the Dream,' said Leigh of Dallas. 'I think pretty well says it. We had a lot of people showed up from the city at the Zebra Center.'

The parade was followed by a large rally at Lee Park. "You're going to see when Congress recognizes legal rights of gays and lesbians in this land," said Dan co-chairman of the National Human Rights Campaign.

Bradley told the crowd, "The day is long passed when politicians won't stand up to recognize our rights and votes."

Anti-tent city law signed on Sunday

United Press International AUSTIN — Texas has a new law that will ban "tent cities" from springing up in the state by restricting the use of state highway rest areas.

Gov. Mark White on Sunday signed into law, effective Aug. 29, a bill that will make illegal for anyone to remain in a rest area for more than 24 hours and to erect any kind of structure.

The bill was passed in response to problems created when a group of jobless people congregated at a roadside park near Houston last year. The population eventually grew to about 300 and the area was dubbed "Tent City."

The settlement drew attention as a symbol of the state's troubled economy.

The camp was closed this year by Harris County authorities because of hazards and repeated outbreaks of fire safety codes that at least one death.

Authorities said it cost $30,000 for the county to store the rest area.

The law includes a provision that will allow non-profit organizations and civic groups — the Jaycees, to provide a break stop for motorists on day weekends.
