USFL teams feeling heat from old Mother Nature

The Saturday forecast for the greater Chicago area wasn't unusual. A National Weather Service prediction called for sunny skies, with a high of 93 degrees. It was perfect weather for a summer's day.

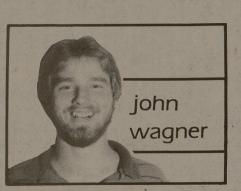

Unless, of course, you're a professional football player. Football, as rumour has it, is supposed to be a winter sport. Who could forget the Green Bay Packers, playing in sub-zero weather on a field that resembled a tundra, with players on the sidelines bundled up like

But some like it hot. Count the United States Football League in. The USFL has said "phooey' to that cold-weather notion, opting for a spring-summer schedule instead of bumping schedules head-to-head with the NFL. The impact of that decision, however, is just starting to make

The USFL is definately feeling the Back to Chicago. The NWS was off by about six degrees, and the temperature reached a record high of 99. If you were a member of the Chicago Blitz or the Michigan Panthers, however, 99 would have seemed like an icebox.

The Panthers and the Blitz squared off Saturday to determine who would have the upper hand in the USFL's Central Division (Michigan won 34-19). The score was secondary, though, to an even more impressive statistic — on the floor of Soldier Field, where the teams battled it out, the mercury soared to 134 de-

A crowd of 25,041 — 7,100 more than the Blitz's average home attendance sat in the heat to watch the contest. You have to wonder, however, how long that will last. And even more importantly, how long can the players stand it?

An example: Late in the fourth quarter, Chicago's Trumaine Johnson caught a nine-yard touchdown pass to cut the Panthers' lead to 27-12. After leaving the field, Johnson sat on the bench, a wet towel draped over his head, and four sideline attendants hovered over him, trying to revive the burned-out - and no doubt overheated — wide receiver.

And the USFL's season is far from over. The teams have played seventeen of the eighteen-game schedule, not counting the playoffs. Baseball's All-Star game will have come and gone, and the USFL will still be playing.

The 12-team league, in its first season, is planning to expand to sixteen teams for the 1984 campaign. Houston is among the cities that have already been granted a franchise. The Gamblers are still in the process of looking for a place to play, but Rice Stadium appears to be owner Dr. Jerry Argovitz's first choice.

Talk about gambling.

Houston in July? Outdoors? With all that humidity? It could be dangerous.

This is something Argovitz ought to think about. If he is a kind man — and judging from the salary he lavished on the No. 1 Gambler, quarterback Jim Kel-ly, he must be — then he should put his team in the Astrodome.

Kelly played his college football at warm-weather Miami, but what about the rest of the team? What if their idea of hot is a date on Saturday night, not a game on Saturday afternoon?
Playing in heat is one thing. Playing in heat and humidity is another. Houstonians can tell horror stories about the taxing effects of living in all that humidity. Sweating, dehydration, lack of energy, loss of memory — and that's just after walking to the mailbox. Try tackling 230-pound fullbacks for 60 minutes. It's enough to make your face mask melt.

Then again, some like it hot, and the USFL may find battling the summer heat more palatable than battling the NFL in the winter. And like they say, it's better to

Rockets to pick Ralph today in draft

United Press International HOUSTON—With the No. 1 pick in today's NBA draft decided months ago, wider speculation in Houston has been devoted to whom the Rockets will select with their second choice-the third pick in the first round. The Rockets have already advertised a "Welcome Ralph Sampson" promotion for tonight in their home arena, the Houston ended tied with

Cleveland with the worse record in basketball last season and won the right to select first in a coin

Charlie Thomas will call the name of the 7-4 Virginia center when the draft begins.

Monday it appeared the team was intent on taking Rodney McCray of Louisville as the third player selected, despite some efforts in Houston by fans to get the club to take Clyde Drexler, a member of the NCAA runnerup Houston Cougars. Drexler, a junior last season, announced he would forego his last year of college ball.

McCray, a 6-7, 220-pound forward, apparently was the choice of coach Bill Fitch.

"I would say that we are leaning heavily toward McCray," Fitch said. "He can do a lot of said. things on the basketball floor. In things on the basketball floor. In looking at films, we have been trade Monday of the No. 3 extremely impressed with him." McCray was voted player of the game in the Aloha Classic, a post-season tournament for NBA prospects. At Louisville, he averaged 11 points and 8.4 rebounds. Rockets spokesman Jim Foley said the team was leaning toward McCray over Tennessee's Dale Ellis.

"McCray is a fine shooter from 15 feet in. He's a great passer and a hard worker," Foley choice could send McCray elsewhere. The Rockets entertained offers, but Foley said the team did not get anything it was interested in.

Thomas and Rockets General Manager-Ray Patterson Monday flew to New York, where the NBA will hold the annual draft. Sampson and McCray are expected to be in New York also.
