Supreme Court rules on international taxes

United Press International WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court handed states a dollars-and-cents victory Monday, ruling they may tax part of the total worldwide income for multinational corporations doing business within the state.

The 5-3 ruling upheld a Cali fornia law — similar to laws in 22 other states — that calls for taxation of that portion of the overall income of a corporation and its foreign subsidiaries attributable to the parent company's operations within state boundaries.

Writing for the court, Justice William Brennan said double taxation — as the corporations claim — is permissible, and rejected claims it invites retaliation by foreign nations against U.S. companies abroad.
