Anchorwoman claims news double standard

United Press International
KANSAS CITY, Mo. — A jury of four women and two men was chosen to hear the lawsuit Tuesday of an anchorwoman who claims a television station demoted her because she was considered unattractive and too old.

Christine Craft, 38, wants Metromedia Inc., former owner of KMBC-TV, to pay her $1.2 million for the loss of her prime-time news position in 1981. She says she lost the anchor job because of a television news double standard: that men can age gracefully while women just get old.

Six jurors, four of them women, were chosen Monday to hear the case, which could last through next week. Opening statements were to begin Tuesday.

"People in anchor positions deserve to be journalists, not beauty queens," Craft, now an anchor at KEYT-TV in Santa Barbara, Calif., said.

Among the reasons listed by Craft for her removal was the station management's opinion that she was unattractive, old, and unstylish for her to succeed in the television ratings.

Potential jurors questioned Monday by U.S. District Judge Joseph E. Stevens were asked whether they had opinions on women delivering the news and the standards of appearance placed on the looks of both male and female news broadcasters.

Prospective jurors also were asked whether they knew any of the people named as potential witnesses, a list of more than 60 people that reads like a "Who's Who" of area broadcasters.

National media critic Ron Powers, plus at least 10 anchors and reporters from the television station, were on the list.

Kansas Gov. John Carlin and one of his aides also may testify.

Craft worked as the 6 p.m. and 10 p.m. anchor for eight months in 1981 at KMBC-TV. She was demoted to a reporter on Aug. 14, 1981, but soon left the station claiming she had been fired.

Craft is seeking reinstatement to the co-anchor position, lost wages and benefits, $200,000 in actual damages and $1 million in punitive damages for the alleged fraud and misrepresentation.

Craft's suit, filed in January, contends she was fired from the position while the defendants say she left the station of her own volition.

Craft also charges she was denied equal pay for equal work because of her sex and was the victim of fraud and misrepresentation by the station.

Texas farmers receive other's rice for PIK

United Press International
WASHINGTON — The government will use California rice to fulfill its obligations to Texas farmers under the payment-in-kind program.

There also will be a transfer of payment-in-kind rice from Arkansas to farmers in Florida, Louisiana and Mississippi, Agriculture Secretary John Block said Monday.

The transfers were required because government-owned supplies of rice are 3.8 million hundredweight short of commitments to farmers in Texas, 1.1 million hundredweight short in Mississippi, 170,000 hundredweight short in Louisiana and 90,000 hundredweight short in Florida.

House Agriculture Chairman Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, said he was pleased with Block's announcement to alleviate a "potentially troublesome" situation.

Because California rice is of a lower class and quality than rice in Texas, Block said that Texas farmers will receive extra quantities of California rice as compensation.

Texas producers who receive California rice may substitute it for their own 1983 crop for use as collateral for government price support loans and then sell their own crop in the market, Block said.

He said farmers receiving the payment-in-kind rice from outside their state will be randomly selected.

In another announcement, the government gave an extra grace period to farmers who are required to redeem price support loans and sell their crops to the government to satisfy payment-in-kind requirements.

The deadline for such action has been moved from Jan. 1 to Jan. 16. Farmers can get extensions if they ask for them and if they have payment-in-kind availability dates that begin August first or earlier.

FBI will suppress mob, Reagan vows at party

United Press International
WASHINGTON — President Reagan went to the FBI's 75th birthday party Tuesday, lauded the G-men as essential to maintaining order and justice in the nation and vowed the bureau will "break the power of the mob in America."

Reagan joined FBI Director William Webster and Attorney General William French Smith in a ceremony at the Justice Department's J. Edgar Hoover Building and signed a proclamation designating Tuesday as "FBI Day."

He said the bureau's new role in fighting drug trafficking reflects a deeper problem — organized crime.

"We're going after organized crime, root and branch. Our goal is to break the power of the mob in America," he said.

Before signing the proclamation, Reagan, 72, leveled some levity at his audience, remarking, "It's nice to recognize something in Washington older than I am."

In the proclamation, the president noted that "fidelity, bravery and integrity" are the FBI's motto and said, "These words serve as a reminder of the vital part this institution plays in maintaining order and justice in our free society."

Theodore Roosevelt was president when Attorney General Charles Bonaparte, the grandson of Napoleon Bonaparte's brother, created the Federal Bureau of Investigation on July 26, 1908, to serve as the investigative arm of the Justice Department.

Reagan noted the bureau's job has changed, from handling the relatively simple violations of America before the Great War to the high-tech crimes of the 1980s.

Over the years, he said, "The FBI has fought against gangsters, fought Axis-inspired espionage and sabotage, dealt serious blows to organized crime, worked to stem racial violence, and undertook the responsibility of safeguarding America against threats of hostile intelligence agents."

Webster, a federal judge before taking over his crimefighting post, is aware of the bureau's need to adapt to changing times.

"We have to be responsive to the special needs and challenges that develop from time to time in our society. We have to identify those trends in time to gear up to them and be prepared to deal with them," he said.

In the beginning, the FBI concentrated on tracking bank robbers and the gangsters who amassed fortunes in bootlegging during Prohibition. Today, its top priorities are white collar and organized crime, terrorism, foreign counter-intelligence, and for the first time, drug trafficking.

National Park, Glenallen, Valdez, Juneau, Sitka, Petersburg and Ketchikan.

Half the House delegation will be Interior Committee members, including Chairman Morris Udall, D-Ariz., and chairmen of three Interior subcommittees, Jim Weaver, D-Ore., John Seiberling, D-Ohio, and Abraham Kazen Jr., D-Texas.
