$4 million site in Juarez Company relocates

United Press International
JUAREZ, Mexico — Officials of an American coupon processing company announced plans Tuesday to spend $4 million on a new three-building complex for an expanded operation in the border city.

Memphis-based Seven Oaks International Inc., which processed more than 750 million coupons last year, has purchased 8.8 acres near the international bridge connecting Juarez with El Paso.

The 130,000-square-foot complex will be completed in seven to 10 months, officials said.

Seven Oaks has leased space in Juarez since 1972 for its coupon clearinghouse, Coupon Redemptions de Mexico, which employs 1,270 in Juarez. The firm also employs 70 people at its data processing and receiving operations in El Paso, called Coupons Redemptions Inc. of El Paso.

The center receives cents-off coupons from retailers throughout the United States, separates and sends the coupons on to the products manufacturers. The Juarez plant is Seven Oaks' only coupon redemption center.

The company also acts as an agent for packaged-goods manufacturers. It verifies and redeems coupons issued by those manufacturers, fulfills promotional offers and issues cash and coupon refunds.

Seven Oaks officials said they could not predict how many additional employees would be added to their workforce in Juarez. But the new facilities are being built in order to allow the company to grow in the future, said Harold Hill, senior vice president and chief operating officer at Seven Oaks.

Harvard's Glashow joins A&M faculty

United Press International
COLLEGE STATION — Dr. Sheldon Glashow, Nobel Prize-winning physicist at Harvard University, will spend portions of the new academic year at here, President Frank E. Vandiver announced Tuesday.

Glashow becomes the second Nobel Prize Laureate in a month to join the Texas A&M faculty. He will serve as a "University Scholar," and will arrive on campus by Sept. 19.

"This is an exciting time for Texas A&M," Vandiver said. "Dr. Glashow's decision to associate with our physics department represents another major step forward in Texas A&M's emerging reputation as one of world's leading research institutions. Of course, we are pleased and proud."

Dr. Norman Bourlaug, called the "Father of the Green Revolution" for his work in crop genetics and 1970 winner of the Nobel Peace Prize, confirmed recently he will also join the Texas A&M faculty for the coming year as Distinguished Professor of International Agriculture.

Vandiver said Glashow has agreed to spend approximately two months at Texas A&M during the academic year which began Monday.

Glashow, who shared the 1979 Nobel in Physics with two other scientists for their explanation of the beginning of the universe, will spend time during his upcoming sabbatical leave from Harvard.

Glashow, a Higgins Professor of Physics at Harvard, is working with other scientists from Texas A&M, the University of Texas, Rice and the University of Houston to locate a superconducting percolator particle accelerator in Texas.

The accelerator, mainly called an atom-smasher, would be the largest ever constructed, with a length of 35 miles and a power of the trillions of electron-

No breakthrough in Tehran hijacking

United Press International
Seventeen hostages, including three Americans, spent their third night aboard a hot, stuffy Air France jetliner at Tehran's airport with hijackers threatening to blow up the plane Tuesday unless France met their demands.

After two days of talks at Mehrabad Airport, there was still no sign of a breakthrough with the four air pirates, suspected by Iran to be Iraqi guerrillas opposed to the Baghdad government of President Saddam Hussein.

Late Monday, French radio in Paris said the hijackers set a deadline for 8 a.m. Tuesday for a French response to demands for the release of "Arab" prisoners in France and justification for France's policy of aiding Iraq, Chad and Lebanon.

French radio, quoting diplomatic sources, said shots rang out Monday night from the airliner's rear door, an apparent attempt by the hijackers to ensure security forces stayed away from the plane.

The hijackers said they would blow up the Boeing 727 if their demands were not met, Tehran Radio said.

The French charges d'affaires in Tehran, Jean Perrin, had no official response Monday to the hijackers' demands, relayed to him by an Iranian Foreign Ministry official handling negotiations from the airport control tower.

"The Iranian officials are using every possible means to try to dissuade the hijackers from dynamiting the aircraft," said a Tehran Radio report monitored in London.

The radio said the hijackers' demands for a doctor, nurse, air conditioner, water provisions and fuel would be a "humanitarian ground" for the safety of the hostages.

Tehran airport communications telephone interview with United Press International in London reported 17 people — 11 members and seven passengers — still on board early Tuesday. But Air France's Tehran office said a French couple taken for medical treatment might not have returned to the plane.

The hijackers, armed with machine guns and grenades, commandeered Air France Flight 781 Saturday and flew it to land in Geneva, then to Damascus before arriving in Tehran Sunday.

Ninety-three of the 111 hostages were released before the plane landed in Tehran. The remaining hostages, including three Americans and a Swedish woman, are

Senate hopes to blast Reagan

United Press International
CORPUS CHRISTI — Democratic Senate hopeful Phil Krueger, campaigning in Rio Grande Valley, Monday led for an end to President Reagan's show of force in Central America.

"There is no sense in this show of power to those countries because they know what it," Krueger said.

"Instead we should establish a hand of friendship that will go a long way toward helping communist interests out of the troubled area."

Krueger said he would support Republican Congressman Phil Gramm of College Station to oppose him in the Senate, "so Gramm would be forced to defend the Reagan administration's record."
