Health is goal of program

The Student Wellness Program at Texas A&M is now operating to aid students in maintaining good health in every aspect of their lives, including physical, mental, spiritual and emotional health.

Dr. Larry Roe, of the Student Counseling Service and head of the advisory committee to the Student Wellness Program, says the program will help students learn to be healthy and have as much control over their health as possible.

When people do get sick or need help, the program will teach them to use doctors, counselors and ministers more effectively, he says.

As of now the program offers two main services — the "Well-line" and the Lifestyle Inventory.

The Well-line is a referral service. Students can call 845-WELL and receive information about various health-related services available at Texas A&M, but no counseling is done over the phone.

The line, which is staffed by two Texas A&M health and physical education doctoral students, is operated from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and is always answered in person.

One of the jobs of the advisory committee is to coordinate this referral system, Roe says.

Another service offered by the program is the Lifestyle Inventory. Roe says it can be taken by most students in less than an hour and the results will pinpoint possible problem areas in the person's life. Advice then can be offered on what to do and where to go about the problem.

The inventory is given through the health and physical education department for a $10 fee. Information about the test can be obtained by calling 845-WELL.

These services are part of a pilot program for the Texas A&M campus, Roe says, and may be expanded if there is positive reaction from students.

The idea for the program originated in the health and physical education department, which already had such a program for the community. Roe says some of the health and physical education faculty thought it would be a good idea also to have a program for the campus.

They contacted Dr. John Koldus, vice president for Student Services, who appointed Roe to head a committee to look into the matter. The committee decided to start the pilot program and called for a study of the effects on Texas A&M students to be conducted six months after the start of the program.

Dr. Glenn Richardson and Dr. Robert Hurlley of the health and physical education department are the co-administrators and head the program in conjunction with the advisory committee. They are in charge of the day-to-day operation of the Well-line.

Programs similar to the Student Wellness Program have been in existence for several years at other universities, Roe says, such as University of Wisconsin at Stevens Point and Southern Illinois University at Carbondale.

First meeting set for MSC Council

by Kathy Wiesepape

The Memorial Student Center Council's first meeting of the school year will be held tonight at 7:05 p.m. in the MSC Council Conference Room.

The council will vote on approval of speakers for the MSC Student Conference on National Affairs, scheduled for February 15-18, 1984. The topic for MSC SCONA is the media and its role in society.

Proposed speakers are Walter Cronkite, former CBS News anchorman; Fred W. Friendly, Columbia University professor and former president of CBS News; and Arthur Miller, Harvard University law professor. Speakers for MSC Great Issues will also be up for approval at the meeting.

Project Orion, a new program for freshmen on MSC committees, will be formally proposed at the council meeting. The project was discussed last year as a way to increase the involvement of the freshman members of the various MSC committees. It has been designed as a kind of freshman training program. Under this plan, the group would meet four times a year and discuss topics such as the MSC philosophy, organizational structure, financial system, and the advantages of involvement in MSC activities.

Soviets expel U.S. diplomat

United Press International
MOSCOW — The Soviet Union today said an American diplomat based in Leningrad has been caught spying and was being expelled from the country.

The official Tass news agency said vice consul Lon David Augustenborg and his wife, Denise, were caught spying by the KGB Sunday in the Leningrad region.

"Vice Consul Lon David Augustenborg of the U.S. General Consulate and his wife, Denise Augustenborg, were detained flagrante delicto in the area of Leningrad on September 11 as they were carrying out an act of espionage," Tass said.

"Evidence was obtained in the course of an investigation, which fully exposes the U.S. diplomat and his wife as being engaged in intelligence gathering activities incompatible with their official status," Tass said.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman in Moscow confirmed Augustenborg was employed at the Leningrad consulate but would not comment on the accusations or say when the diplomat would be leaving the Soviet Union.

Richard Osborne, a first secretary in the economic section of the Moscow embassy, was expelled in March after a KGB statement said he was caught with an espionage radio set and notes written on quick-dissolving paper.

Old gun may be sold to compensate victim

United Press International
SAN ANTONIO — More than 100 years ago, the Texas Rangers used the famed Winchester 73 rifle to establish law and order on the wild Texas frontier.

Today, one of the antique guns is the focal point of court action seeking compensation for the victim of a crime.

Since 1981, a Winchester 73 rifle manufactured in Massachusetts in 1882 for the U.S. Cavalry has been locked up in a Bexar County Courthouse vault.

It was used as evidence in the aggravated assault trial of Gerald Charles Burdick, 45, who was convicted of shooting Kirby councilwoman Clara Weller in the back. The shooting by the drunken Burdick left Weller, 67, paralyzed from the waist down.

"It's ironic it was used to shoot another official," District Court Clerk David Garcia said of the gun which eventually came to belong to Burdick's family.

After the trial, Texas Rangers and sheriff's deputies in San Antonio asked Garcia if they could keep the antique rifle. But Garcia said Weller wanted it destroyed.

Texas Ranger Al Cuellar dropped his request for the gun saying: "If she wants it destroyed, we want it destroyed."

But the old gun has gotten a reprieve. Carl Besch, an attorney who represents Weller, last week he is seeking a court hearing to have the rifle sold to pay some of Weller's hospital bills.

Besch said the woman owned more than $18,000. The gun valued at about $2,500, but may be auctioned for more, especially because of its recent history.

"It must be rare that it is sold as an old gun and it was used recently in the commission of a crime," Cuellar said. "It probably made the gun more valuable."

Besch said he planned to file a motion with a district judge to have the gun auctioned to the highest bidder.
