Judge indicts ex-oil boss

United Press International MEXICO CITY — A federal judge indicted on fraud a former Petroleum Workers Union official, who charged he was abducted in Texas by two hired gunmen and turned over to Mexican authorities.

District Court Judge Jorge Reyes Tayabares ruled Tuesday that "sufficient evidence exists to formally indict" Hector Garcia Hernandez on charges he embezzled one billion pesos, worth $700,000 at the current exchange rate.

Salvador Barragan Camacho, top boss of the oil workers union, accused Garcia Hernandez of embezzling the union funds when Hernandez was in charge of education and welfare for the labor organization.

Garcia Hernandez in turn accused Barragan Camacho, who also is a senator, of issuing the orders to misappropriate the funds and said he turned the money over to Barragan Camacho in cash.

The case took on international implications last week when two gunmen, who claimed they were hired by Barragan Camacho, dragged Garcia Hernandez from his McAllen condominium and drove him 10 miles across the border in his own car, McAllen detectives said.

The kidnapers turned him over to police in Tampico, 200 miles northeast of Mexico City.

A judge ruled Monday that the two gunmen would be freed provisionally after posting bail of $160 each, saying that they had captured Garcia Hernandez in the Mexican border town of Matamoros and not in Texas.

In another development connected to the powerful Petroleum Workers Union, questions continued over the death of leader Oscar Pancardo Torres in a traffic accident near Poza Rica, Mexico last week.

Pancardo Torres and a secretary died in the head-on crash with a tractor-trailer, while the driver died of a gunshot wound to his head.

First reports said the shot was fired before the accident, a subsequent report said Pancardo Torres' bodyguards killed the driver after the accident, while police authorities said Monday that the driver committed suicide right after the car crash over consternation about the death of Pancardo Torres.

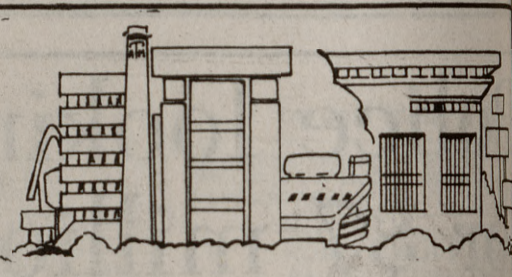

Congress began sessions Tuesday to study a new presidential proposal to increase Mexico's access to international credit and to mint new coins to replace those outmoded by inflation.

The government said the increased contributions to the International Monetary Fund and two international development banks would be a signal to the international financial community that Mexico is coming out of its worst economic crisis in 50 years.
