plans to use this system extensively in the future, as it also can be used to help DJs supplement their broadcasts with the use of sound effects.

The station's album collection, which numbers over 2000, has been assembled during the past decade with the help of major record companies and private individuals.

"Record companies used to send us promotional copies of albums," Gross says, "but as the record business went down, the companies had to cut back on what they were giving away."

Cable stations were at the bottom of the list, he says, and colleges were below that. Fortunately, Gross says, KANM was able to work out deals with local record stores, exchanging advertising time for records.

Gross, who already has received his degree in chemical engineering and currently is earning a degree in electrical engineering, credits the emergence of music programming (such as MTV) with helping revive the recording industry.

Now KANM has albums ranging from groups such as Def Leppard to the B-52s, and from Dolly Parton to Cream. There are 42 regular DJs, as well as several alternates. DJs have four-hour shifts, and they still set their own format.

"We have begun collecting dues from the members," Gross says, "because the bills have got to be paid. We also are doing some advertising, but not much — only two or three (commercial) spots an hour."

"Now we can start to plan for the long term," Gross says, "and that's something that has taken us ten years to do."

Happy Birthday KANM.
