Ocean research project a success

by Ed Alanis
Battalion Reporter

Texas A&M oceanography students and researchers have just finished a major coring project in the Gulf of Mexico, making money for the University and saving money for major oil companies.

Coring is a scientific process of surveying the ocean floor to evaluate oil and gas prospects.

Dr. James M. Brooks, associate research scientist in the oceanography department, headed a 15-member team that spent the entire month of September working in the gulf. The group included five student research assistants.

The purpose of the project was to provide information to oil companies bidding in the United States' eastern gulf lease sale set for November.

Before the cruise began, the group had almost $230,000 in contracts from Tenneco Oil, Getty Oil Corp., Atlantic Richfield Co. and Mobil Oil Corp. to collect core samples. Additional contracts were made with other companies while the cruise was in progress.

The oil companies are paying an additional $70,000 for a geochemical analysis of the core samples.

Texas A&M scientists are working now to have the reports finished in time for the November lease sale.

"The project was a success,"

Brooks said. "We got what we went after."

Several good samples were taken from the eastern regions of the Gulf, near the Florida coast.

Texas A&M leased a 200-foot work boat, the "Citation," and outfitted it with University-owned equipment for the project.

Research groups from Texas A&M have done similar work for oil companies in the Gulf of Mexico during the past two years, and there are plans for more work in the future, Brooks said.

When groups from Texas A&M do this kind of work, everyone involved benefits, Brooks said.

Senior class council to sell elephant t-shirts

The Class of '84 will sell two different styles of t-shirts for seniors Wednesday through Friday in the Memorial Student Center.

The class council is selling two shirt styles because it is trying to appeal to more seniors, Barbara Brunner, class vice president, said.

"We are selling t-shirts because it is a tradition for seniors to have a specified elephant shirt," said Brunner.

The shirts, a short sleeve and a long sleeve, will be available in small, medium, large and extra-large sizes.

The short sleeve t-shirt, which costs $5, is maroon with silver lettering. The front of the shirt has an emblem of an elephant with '84 printed on its trunk.

The long sleeve shirt, costing $10, is white and has an emblem with three elephants on the front and back of the shirt. And TAMU Zip '84 is printed in maroon lettering on the sleeve of the shirt.

All profits made from selling the t-shirts will go towards the purchase of the Class of '84 class gift.

The t-shirts will be on sale from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the main hall of the MSC.

The t-shirts also will be sold the week before elephant walk. Elephant walk will be Nov. 22.

Lecture series program to be decided tonight

by Kathy Wiesepape

The Memorial Student Center Council will vote tonight on three program proposals for the 1984 Endowed Lecture Series.

The proposals, which include subjects and speakers for three different programs, have been prepared by the Endowed Lecture Series Committee. The one selected by the MSC Council will be forwarded to the MSC Enrichment Board for final approval.

The most expensive proposal is a panel of former presidents Jimmy Carter and Richard Nixon with Yale law professor Eugene V. Rostow. The subject of discussion would be "The Perspective on Arms Control: BALT I to START."

MSC Council President Greg Hawkins said the fund raising committee would have to raise $88,000 for this proposal.

The second proposal is a program entitled "The Price of Peace." Nixon would talk about U.S.-Soviet relations and his new book, "Perfect Peace." For this program, the fund-raising committee would have to raise $36,000.

The third proposal, "Perspectives on U.S. Foreign Policy," was approved for last year's Endowed Lecture Series. It would involve a panel of former U.S. Secretaries of State. Alexander Haig, Dean Rusk, Cyrus Vance and Henry Kissinger were approved as possible speakers last year, Hawkins said. This program would take $56,000 from the fund-raising committee.

Last year, plans for this program were changed because not all of the speakers were available at the scheduled time.
