

Preventing rape: Program tells how

by Rhonda Snider
Battalion Reporter
The Department of Student Affairs will present a program on rape prevention, defense and prosecution Monday at 7:30 in 308 Rudder.

Jan Winniford, assistant director of student affairs, says there will be three speakers at the one-hour presentation, "Rape — The Crime Against Women."

Bill Turner, assistant district attorney, will explain the legalities of rape prosecution and talk about Bryan-College Station's new rape crisis center, Winniford said.

Winniford and Becky Myklebust, graduate assistant for the student affairs department and coordinator of the program, will discuss security measures that can be taken to decrease the chances of being raped. They also will discuss two theories of defense against rape, Winniford said.

According to student affairs department statistics, there were no rapes reported on campus in the past two school years. However, College Station reported 16 rapes in 1982 and nine so far this year. Bryan reported 28 rapes in 1982 and 10 so far this year.

Winniford said some of the victims in Bryan and College Station were students, but that she is not sure how many.

"We want students to realize that A&M is not a vacuum where nothing bad happens," she said. The Department of Student Affairs usually sponsors programs similar to Monday night's presentation twice each semester.

Last semester the department sponsored two rape awareness programs in which it showed films featuring people who had committed rapes, she said. These programs are open to everyone at the University and are extensively publicized.

Winniford said the department also sponsors programs for individual groups and clubs upon request.

"The department is here to look out after the safety and well-being of the students," she said.

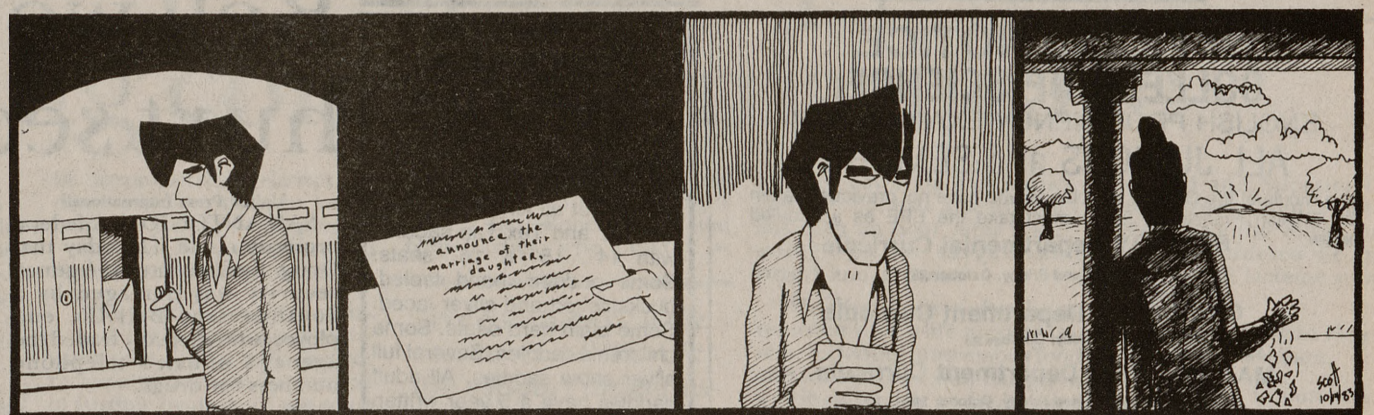

The department wants to make students more aware of how they can protect themselves and their belongings, she said.

Winniford said this is especially important for those who live on campus because the opportunity for crime is increased by the number of people.

Winniford said the department is emphasizing prevention.

"So many things are the result of opportunities being there when it could have been prevented," she said.

Veterinarians licensed in Texas will meet here Friday and Saturday to discuss recent advances in the treatment of horses.

About 70 practitioners are expected to attend the seventh annual Equine Practitioners Conference, which is sponsored by the Texas A&M College of Veterinary Medicine and the Office of Continuing Education, Dr. Walter Juliff, conference coordinator, says.

"The practitioners are all Texas licensed but may live in other states," he said. Veterinarians are expected from Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Michigan and New Jersey, he said.

Members of the large animal medicine and surgery faculty and the staff of the Texas Veterinary Medical Diagnostic Laboratory will deliver presentations Friday afternoon.

Friday night after a dinner and reception at the Aggieeland Inn, Dr. Dan Roberts of Wichita Falls, will talk about his 40 years as a horse veterinarian.

"Dr. Roberts is a long time practitioner and a valuable speaker," Juliff said.

The Saturday morning program will begin with a presentation by keynote speaker, Dr. Marvin Beeman of Littleton, Colorado. Beeman is a former president of the American Association of Equine Practitioners. He will give three presentations during the day. They will cover lameness problems in horses and the examination of horses before a sale.

Lubbock blast flattens offices

United Press International
LUBBOCK — City health officials Thursday continued dealing with a hepatitis outbreak by using a state health department, refusing to allow a boiler room explosion at their building to disrupt the task.

Officials reported 72 cases of confirmed hepatitis type A, which has been linked with People's Restaurant. The restaurant remains closed voluntarily until it is deemed safe to reopen.

Health officials were working to control the outbreak Wednesday when a blast rendered the building in north Lubbock unsafe, killing one woman and seriously injuring another.

Authorities said services are pending for Norma Castro Guerrero, 25, of Lubbock. Her body was found partially covered by debris near the exploded boiler room.

Autopsy results indicated she died of massive head and chest injuries.

A Lubbock General Hospital spokeswoman reported city health aide Elvira Martinez, 55, remains in serious condition with second-degree burns and fractures.

Eight people were taken to the hospital after the explosion. Mrs. Martinez was the only one seriously injured, the spokeswoman said.

Public Health Administrator Doug Goodman said he had retrieved records about the hepatitis outbreak from the torn building.

"The hepatitis investigation will go on uninterrupted," Goodman said, adding two epidemiologists from Austin had arrived to help city health officials working at the state health department.

THE PIRATES OF PENZANCE

Starring Maria Muldaur, October 23, 1983

Winner of three Tony Awards, this band of fierce yet totally fallible swashbucklers is pursued by their former apprentice, who is honor bound to exterminate them. They may yet be saved by their pursuer's starry-eyed love for the fetching Mabel, played by pop recording star Maria Muldaur. A giddy, rollicking adaptation of the original Gilbert and Sullivan operetta.

"If you go to the theatre only once this year, this is the show!" —Newsweek.

CRIMES OF THE HEART

February 2, 1984

This Pulitzer Prize winning tragi-comedy takes us to an evening with the MaGrath sisters: Babe, out on bail from shooting her husband; Meg, the struggling singer on leave from a psycho ward; and Lenny, coming to grips with life as an old maid. A wonder of Southern Gothic humor.

"A crime for anyone interested in the theatre not to see this play." —New York Post.

BLUES IN THE NIGHT

Starring Della Reese, March 27, 1984

A sultry, sizzling show about three women in 1938 hotel rooms crying the blues. Defiant, nostalgic memories of women who can neither live with men nor without them. Great blues and jazz.

"One of the best musical scores to hit Broadway in many a year." —Newark Star Ledger.

PUMP BOYS AND DINETTES

April 16, 1984

Take Highway 57 from Smyrna towards Frog Level. Watch close and you'll find a gas station right across from the Double Cupp Diner, run by them Cupp sisters, Prudie and Rhetta. Roll into the station and them "Pump Boys"—Jim Jackson, Eddie and L.M.—will fall all over you, (if you're buying the beer, of course). Or just pull off on the side and get your ears filled with high octane down-home country rockabilly, bluegrass, gospel and blues.

"As refreshing as an ice-cold beer after a bowl of five alarm chili." —New York Times.
