

A&M to host global conference

by Bonnie Langford

Battalion Staff
More than 70 specialists from around the world have been invited to come to Texas A&M in June 1985 for the International Conference on Water and Food. International and local engineers, policy makers, food producers and meteorologists are scheduled to attend the conference to discuss problems on a global scale.

Dr. Bill Stouts, program chairman, said:

"We want to plan action by involving the decision makers. Hopefully, we will stimulate some projects, and change food and water policies as they relate to the world food supply."

Special Projects Coordinator Jack Cross said the idea came from President Frank E. Vandiver, who he said believes problems like world hunger can and should be solved by a network of universities.

Texas A&M is a natural school to have a leadership role in this network because of its history of helping with agricultural problems, he said.

A major international conference like this also will help the world become more aware of Texas A&M, Cross said.

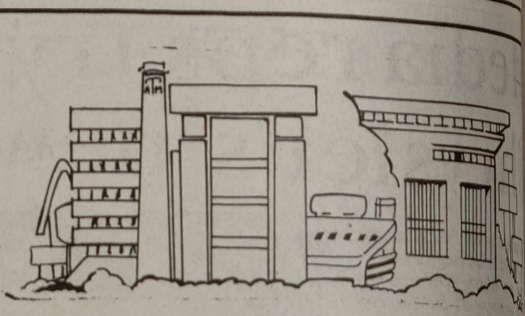

Nobel laureate Norman Borlaug, who is joining the Texas A&M faculty, has been invited to serve on the conference's advisory committee. Committee members will give presentations on their studies, problems and observations in food production and water.

Representatives from World Bank, Inter-American Development Bank, the Ford Foundation and the U.S. Office of Science and Technology also will serve on the board.

People from such industries as Mitchell Energy, Whirlpool, Tenneco, Quaker Oats and Ford Motor Co. have been invited to speak.

Cross said Texas A&M is inviting representatives from all areas to help improve relations between institutions and agencies.

Great Aggie Pumpkin race is Sunday

The TAMU Roadrunners will sponsor "The Great Aggie Pumpkin Road Race" Sunday, Oct. 30. The three mile race will begin in front of G. Rollie White Coliseum and will go around the campus. Day-of-race entry will cost $8. The Roadrunners invite everyone to "come out and run for the health of it!" For more information, call 260-4002.

Physics sponsors movie Friday

The Department of Physics will present Friday a series of films on lectures by physicist Richard Feynman. Beginning at 4 p.m. in 145 Physics Building, Friday's film will be "The Distinction of Past and Future." In the movie Feynman shows that in the laws of today's physics there does not seem to be any distinction between the past and the future. However, as a result of examining these laws, it now become necessary to add the hypothesis that in the past the universe was more ordered in the technical sense than it is today, Feynman says. The presentation is free and anyone interested is invited to attend. Free popcorn will be available.

Energy awareness week observation

In observance of American Energy Awareness Week which continues through Saturday, the Texas Energy Extension Service at Texas A&M is sponsoring a booth at Manor East Mall to educate the public on major home energy conservation concerns. Representatives from the Energy Extension Service will be on hand today from 2 p.m. to 7 p.m. to show a 10-minute film on home energy conservation, to hand out helpful information and answer questions.

Update focuses on A&M assets

by Christine Mallon

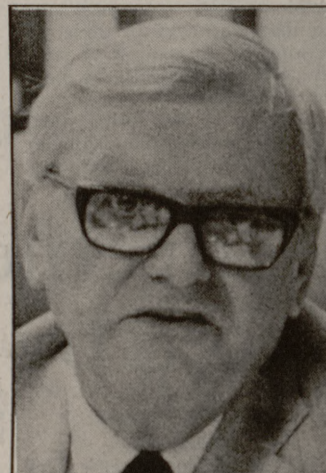

Battalion Staff
Former students, parents of currently enrolled students, and all interested persons are invited to attend the first Texas A&M Update Program Friday at Rudder Center.

Clinton A. Phillips, dean of faculties and associate provost, organized the program to provide the public with information about the University's most recent advancements and developments.

The program will focus on examples of the University's contributions to Texas, the country and the world.

Representatives from the University's 10 academic colleges will make presentations about each of their programs and faculty members will discuss their ideas and goals.

Registration for the program begins Friday at 1 p.m. on the second floor of Rudder Tower. The program will begin at 2 p.m. in 701 Rudder and will be followed by two 45-minute group sessions by the various colleges. A small and brief reception will conclude the program.

Clinton A. Phillips

Dallas officers arrest bank robbery suspect

United Press International
DALLAS — Police Wednesday arrested a man they accused of using bombs to threaten tellers in at least three recent bank robberies in the Dallas area. Dallas police Sgt. Harold Rice identified the man as Horace Virgil Cranks of the Dallas suburb of Garland. He said Cranks was jailed on three counts of aggravated robbery.

Investigators said that in each instance, a man threatened a teller with a bomb and left a briefcase he said contained a bomb.
