LaRussa's strong second half surge with the White Sox, in which they won 59 of 85 games, go-round as Hoyt grabbed the brass ring 24 times, Richard Dotson won 22 games, Floyd Bannister 16, Jerry Koosman 11 and Britt Burns 10. In the BBWAA's inaugural voting for American League skipper, LaRussa received 17 of a possible 28 votes to easily outdistance Baltimore manager Joe Altobelli, who was named on seven ballots.

Bobby Cox of Toronto received the remaining four votes for keeping the Blue Jays in pennant contention until a weary bullpen gave out in August.

LaRussa, a former infielder for the A's, Braves and Cubs, has been manager of the White Sox since the middle of the 1979 season. The only AL manager with dence was in stark contrast to the Club co-owner Eddie Einhorn gave LaRussa a vote of confidence by extending his contract, saying, "We feel we have one of the best young managers in the business.

The White Sox shook off a sluggish start to run away from the pack after the All-Star break and beaten opponents said Chicago had a knack for "winning ugly," referring to the slightly sloppy nature of many White effusive style of predecessor Earl Weaver, had spent 14 years in the Orioles' organization before taking over the top spot and he seemed comfortable maintaining Weaver's platoon policy. He managed the Orioles to 98 victories and a decisive AL East title. After dropping the playoff opener against Chicago, Balti-more took three straight games to earn a World Series berth and the Orioles closed out Philadelphia in five games.

Altobelli, whose quiet confi-
