

Grenada swears in interim government

United Press International
ST. GEORGE'S, Grenada — Grenadian officials swore in an interim government Tuesday and lifted a state of emergency as plans progressed to restore democracy on the island nation. James Dandridge, spokesman for the U.S. mission, also said a military prison camp erected on a dusty field near Point Salines will be shut down Wednesday.

Forty prisoners will be transferred to the Richmond Hill prison run by the six-nation Caribbean peace-keeping forces and 108 others will be released, he said.

Up to 1,130 Cuban and Grenadian prisoners were detained at the jail during the U.S.-led invasion following a militant Marxist coup toppled and killed Prime Minister Maurice Bishop.

Governor General Sir Paul Scoon administered the oath of office to five members of the nine-person advisory council that will govern the island for the next six months to a year.

He said he now will resume his mostly ceremonial position as Queen Elizabeth II's personal representative in Grenada.

Antony R. Rushford, legal adviser to Scoon, said later a state of emergency imposed shortly after the U.S. landing Oct. 25 "has been lifted."

Rushford said a three-member legal panel would be set up shortly by Grenada's Supreme Court chief justice to provide a legal framework for the investigation and possible prosecution of people detained during military roundups.

Rushford said political parties, including the left-wing New Jewel Movement founded by Bishop, have not been banned in Grenada.

The non-political advisory council will be chaired by educator Nicholas Brathwaite until the designated permanent chairman, Alister McIntyre, deputy secretary general of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development, arrives in Grenada, probably next week.

Brathwaite said, "We will not delay one day whereby the people can have elected government." Scoon previously said elections could be held in six months to a year.

On Monday night, U.S. troops manning a roadblock near the village of Lance aux Epines were fired on by snipers, soldiers at the roadblock told UPI. The soldiers said they took cover in a house. No one was injured.

Gunmen fire seven shots

U.S. naval officer killed

United Press International
ATHENS, Greece — Two gunmen on a motor scooter fired seven shots into a U.S. Embassy car at a stop light in rush hour traffic Tuesday, killing a senior American naval officer and his Greek driver.

In a separate anti-American incident in Athens Tuesday, police said a bomb exploded beneath a car owned by a U.S. citizen, slightly damaging the vehicle. No injuries were reported.

No group immediately claimed responsibility for the killings or the blast, and police said no suspects had been arrested.

"Although we don't know the affiliation of the assassins, the killing has all the earmarks of the work of cowardly, despicable terrorists," a State Department spokesman said in Washington.

Police identified the slain officer as Capt. George Tsantes, 53, a Greek-American from Merchantville, N.J., who was chief of American Naval Mission of the Joint United States Mission of Aid to Greece.

His driver, Nikos Veloutsos, 46, died later in an Athens hospital.

It was the first assassination of an American official in Greece since Richard Welch, chief of the CIA station in Athens, was shot and killed Dec. 23, 1975.

The killers struck as Tsantes was being driven to work through rush hour traffic on the six-lane Athens-Kifissia highway that links the Greek capital to its northern suburbs.

The gunmen pulled up beside Tsantes' black Plymouth at a stoplight and fired seven rounds from a .45-caliber pistol into the official embassy car.

Tsantes was killed instantly by four bullets, two of them in his heart.

The driver was shot twice in the abdomen and once in the arm and died after five hours of surgery.

A taxi driver who saw the attack said the gunmen sped off toward Athens. Their motor scooter was found abandoned on a side street, police said.

Tsantes, who had been in Athens since April, is survived by his wife Thalia, two sons and a daughter.

The killing came six days after security at U.S. bases in Greece was increased following warnings of a possible bomb attack against American military personnel, a government spokesman said.

The spokesman said the attack was part of general security measures being taken following the suicide-bomb attack on U.S. and French peace-keeping forces in Beirut last month.

Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou expressed his "deep regrets" over the killing. U.S. Ambassador Monteague Stearns said police were "billed to hunt for the killers."
