Former Cowboys assistant challenges teacher Sunday

United Press International
 IRVING, Texas — Tom Landry has sent four assistants into the harsh world of National Football League coaching and one of them will try to show his instructor a thing or two Sunday at Texas Stadium.

Cowboys, only one man left Landry's staff to take a top job elsewhere in the NFL. And after striking out twice, that man — Dick Nolan — is back with the Cowboys.

But for three straight years, beginning with the 1981 season, a Landry student struck out on his own. Dan Reeves left that year to be the coach of the Denver Broncos, Mike Ditka left the following season to guide the fortunes of the Chicago Bears and now John Mackovic is in his first year as head coach of the Kansas City Chiefs.

For the first time, one of those three will face Landry across a playing field when the Chiefs and Cowboys collide Sunday — Kansas City (5-6) clinging to a hope of making the playoffs and Dallas (9-2) trying to keep pace with the stampeding Washington Redskins.

It will be only the third game in the history of the two teams, who came into existence the same year in the same town as part of the AFL-NFL war.

"You always have special feelings when you face someone with whom you have worked," said Mackovic, who spent two years on Landry's staff following a meteoric collegiate coaching career and who has installed a pass-minded offense with the Chiefs. "I know it is going to be a challenge and there is some extra excitement about it."

"But I have to remove myself from that as much as possible and simply do the things that will best help our team to win."

Mackovic can only hope he has better luck against Landry than did Nolan, who coached both San Francisco and New Orleans before finally returning to Dallas as an assistant.

Nolan's record against Landry was 1-5-1, three of those losses coming in successive years in the playoffs.

The Cowboys — who have trailed in all 11 of their games this year — are coming off one of only two losses they have suffered this season. But they still find themselves deadlocked with the Redskins atop the NFC East. Dallas and Washington meet again Dec. 11 with that game likely deciding the division title.

Akeem leads Coogs against N.C. State Saturday

United Press International
 SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — Forget about Lorenzo Charles' slam dunk with three seconds left that gave North Carolina State a national championship last April.

It's a new season and North Carolina State will start fresh against the team it beat in the final, the University of Houston.

The NCAA finalists will inaugurate the 1983-84 college basketball season Saturday when they meet in the Basket Ball of Fame Tip-Off Classic.

"It's a real honor to play on the last day of the season, and it's also a privilege to play on the first day of the season — especially against a team like Houston," said North Carolina State Coach Jim Valvano.

Houston coach Guy Lewis said his team is not out to avenge last April's 54-52 setback to North Carolina State in the NCAA finals.

"They're a different team; we're a different team and this is a new season," he said. "The game is on national television so we don't want to go up there to die."

Houston is led by 7-foot junior center Akeem Abdul Olajuwon, the spark plug of the Cougars' so-called "Phi Slama Jama" fraternity. The native of Nigeria, who had limited basketball experience before arriving at Houston, is on his way to becoming one of college basketball's most dominant players.

"Akeem is noticeably better this year," Lewis said.

He'll have to be. Houston will be without starting forwards 6-foot-9 Larry Micheaux and 6-foot-7 Clyde Drexler, who decided to forego his senior year to sign with the NBA's Portland Trail Blazers.

Micheaux and Drexler averaged 30 points and 16 rebounds the last two seasons.

"The biggest progress is making it in his rebound without Micheaux and Drexler," said Lewis. "That is what we're concerned about the most."

Besides Olajuwon, the starters back from last year's 3 team are guards Mike Young and Alvin Franklin, leading contenders for the coveted forward spots are veteran Benny Anders and Reid and newcomers Rickie Williams and Braxton Clark.

Like Houston, North Carolina State was hurt by graduation. The Wolfpack lost forwards Thurl Bailey and guards DeWitt Wittenburg and Sidney Lewis.

"We lost our leading rebounder and assist man, according to our fans, we're supposed to be weaker," Valvano said. "They want us to be just as good as we were last year."
