

Anti-crime team started

United Press International
LUBBOCK — A series of 26 armed robberies of businesses in just over a month has triggered police into stationing shotgun squads at selected sites.

Lubbock Police Chief Thomas Nichols would not outline how many officers were involved. Public affairs officer Bill Morgan said policemen are being stationed out of sight at businesses that are likely targets for a robbery.

Anyone trying to rob a business runs the risk of encountering a shotgun squad "ready to take him on," Morgan said.

The shotgun squads were last used after a series of robberies in January, but officials said they didn't know whether the squads or a rash of heavy snow stopped those robberies.

"Drastic problems require drastic measures to resolve them," Nichols said.

The teams are made up from officers from the traffic accident and detective divisions rather than drawing from officers used to patrol the streets.

The men on the squads realize the need for safety of store employees and the public, Nichols said, but the teams are ready to use their guns against robbers.

Morgan said shotgun squads had been used in the 1960s, but this is only the second time since then that they had been deployed. He said the squads formed in January encountered no confrontations.

Television reporter finds body

United Press International
CORPUS CHRISTI — A television reporter preparing a feature on transients found a homicide victim's body Thursday in an abandoned downtown house.

Karen Boudrieu of KZTV told police she was looking through the front door of the house, which is frequented by transients, and spotted the body lying in a pool of blood.

Police Lt. Rodney Hohle identified the victim as John McDonnell, 58, believed to be from Massachusetts.

McDonnell died from a blow to the head, police said.

Police searched the house and found a man in his 20s hiding in the attic, but Hohle said "at this point there doesn't appear to be any connection."

Attorney Allen Yafe, whose office is across the street from the vacant house, said another body was found there a year ago.

The house had been used as a meeting place of Alcoholics Anonymous as recently as two years ago, Yafe said.

Drug charges dropped

Representative cleared

United Press International
WASHINGTON — Six-term Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Texas, was cleared of cocaine use on Capitol Hill Thursday by the House Ethics Committee, but he refused to answer questions about an allegation he used cocaine in the Cayman Islands.

The House panel cleared Wilson, 50, and Rep. Donald Dellums, D-Calif., of using drugs in their official capacities but found "substantial evidence" of drug use by three former congressmen and among congressional employees.

But Wilson appeared surprised when a reporter told him the report revealed that he refused to answer a question during an Oct. 3 deposition.

"That must have been a question my lawyer told me was outside the scope of what they were taking," he said. "I can't possibly answer every question that was raised."

The Justice Department said in July it found insufficient evidence to warrant prosecution of Wilson.

The House committee said Wilson refused to talk about the Cayman Islands charges made by Elizabeth Wickersham, a former mer model who is now an Atlanta cable television talk show host.

Wickersham told the committee she took a picture, which she no longer has, of him using cocaine while they were alone during a 1980 summer vacation.

Wilson has vigorously denied the cocaine allegations for nearly a year and has blamed them on former friend Paul Brown.

because "he just looked silly and it was quite unusual to see a congressman do that."

When asked whether his refusal to talk about the allegation might leave doubt in the minds of some of his constituents, Wilson told UPI:

"I guess the whole thing does, darling, and you can just write it like that."

The report said Wilson would not answer questions about the possible drug use "in what he characterized as a 'purely private setting' unrelated to all aspects to his official duties as a member of the House of Representatives" unless the committee directed him to do so.

The report said special Counsel Joseph Califano recommended against it because if the allegation were true, it would be outside the official scope of investigation into drug use on Capitol Hill.

"With respect to the allegations, the evidence is weak and the Department of Justice has declined prosecution," the report said. "The special counsel had therefore recommended against any disciplinary action with respect to Rep. Wilson."

Wilson has vigorously denied the cocaine allegations for nearly a year and has blamed them on former friend Paul Brown.

He accused the Justice Department of wasting taxpayer money on the allegations against Brown. Wilson helped Brown to jail for mail fraud including embezzlement of $29,000 from the congressional

The report showed:

• Brown, a 29-year-old member of League City, accused Wilson of using drugs during a 1980 trip to Las Vegas and a 1980 trip to the Cayman Islands.

• Wickersham testified Wilson used cocaine on an annual vacation trip to the Cayman Islands and marijuana on several occasions in the District of Columbia. However, she denied using it in a hot tub, limousine during the other times Brown alleged but said she and Brown had used cocaine without Wilson's knowledge in Las Vegas.
