$6.5 million robbery third largest in U.S.

United Press International
MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Two masked gunmen who robbed a Wells Fargo office on Thanksgiving Day made off with $6.5 million in cash, checks and negotiable bonds, making it the third largest holdup in the nation's history, an audit showed Saturday.

"There was $6.5 million total loss," Lt. Glynn King of the Memphis Police Department said following a meeting with Wells Fargo officials who handled the audit.

King indicated Wells Fargo employees were being scrutinized as possible suspects in the theft.

"We're looking at everybody connected with Wells Fargo," he said. "We're interviewing all employees, past employees and we're canvassing that area of the city trying to find anyone who may have seen anything."

Wells Fargo officials in Memphis refused to discuss the robbery or audit, as did spokesmen in Atlanta, where the firm's national headquarters is located. The $6.5 million theft represented $5.2 million in cash, approximately $500,000 in negotiable bonds and $750,000 in checks.

King said "a substantial amount" of the cash was traceable by recorded serial numbers. However, he said it would take some time to determine the origin of the checks, since the thieves also took the security firm's deposit paperwork.

The identities of the two men who robbed the Memphis office at gunpoint remained a mystery.

"We don't have any idea who did it," King said. He said there was nothing to indicate the men left the Memphis area, although the FBI has spread information on the holdup nationwide.

King said the only information obtained on a getaway vehicle was a description of a brown truck or van, about "the size of a bread truck," with a white bumper and probably a Tennessee license plate with the last three digits "23T."

Wells Fargo was also the victim of the nation's second largest robbery Sept. 12 in West Hartford, Conn., when a Wells Fargo Armored Service guard drew a gun on two fellow employees, injected them with a drug and escaped with $7 million.

The largest U.S. cash robbery took place Dec. 12, 1982, when $11 million was taken from a Sentry armored car courier in New York.

At least 23 killed in Texas

Holiday death count rises

United Press International
A vicious wind storm that ripped down power lines in north Texas triggered a bizarre traffic accident that killed a woman and injured her husband and two children as the Thanksgiving weekend neared its end.

At least 23 people died on Texas roadways during the holiday weekend, officials reported, including Niek-Sukini Amuztar, a student at East Texas State University from Commerce who was killed in a one-car crash Saturday night near Greenville.

Amuztar's car, which carried her husband, two daughters, and a 9-year-old girl, ran into a sagging power line stretched across Texas Highway 224 about one mile northeast of Greenville, the Hunt County Sheriff's Department reported.

The line, ripped down by 55 mph winds that accompanied a blustering thunderstorm Saturday evening, hung at headlight level, officials said.

It flipped the car end-for-end, leaving it lying on its top.

Amuztar's husband, Soeyono Amuztar 45, who was driving, was injured. So were his 12- and 3-year-old daughters, Haruki and Mawaaddah. They were all treated and released from Citizens' General Hospital in Greenville. Another passenger, an unidentified 9-year-old girl, was also treated and released.

The four-day holiday weekend began at 6 p.m. Wednesday and concluded at midnight Sunday.

Among the dead is a Houston man who was crushed between two cars in a freak accident on the shoulder of a freeway late Friday.

L.C. Stethens, 51, was standing between two parked cars when a car veered out of control and struck the rear of one of the cars, pushing it into the other.

Stethens was pinned between the parked vehicles, police reported. He died early Saturday. Another man was seriously injured in the accident.

In suburban Dallas, Anne Elizabeth Carsey, 22, a University of Texas student, was killed when the car in which she was riding was rammed broadside by a vehicle which ran a red light. Carsey was pronounced dead at the scene Friday night.
