King remembered on 55th birthday

United Press International
One year before it becomes a national holiday, the 55th birthday of slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. was commemorated Sunday by his widow and other Americans who remembered King's dream of equality and peace.
King, a Baptist minister who won the Nobel Peace Prize, was assassinated April 4, 1968 in Memphis, Tenn. He would have been 55 Sunday.
Coretta Scott King, who led the fight for the federal holiday, attended a concert of gospel music in the Newark, N.J. Symphony Hall featuring speeches by civic leaders.
After King's death she created the Atlanta-based Martin Luther King, Jr. Center for Nonviolent Social Change, which has since served as the impetus for national celebrations of his birth.
She also planned to appear at a birthday cocktail party at the Grand Hyatt Hotel followed by an evening of music and poetry in the Town Hall with readings by Coleen Dewhurst and Gloria Foster.

Civic leaders in Pittsburgh also resurrected King's words as they renamed a Port Authority Transit of Allegheny County bus line that opened last February the "Martin Luther King, Jr. East Busway."
The busway, which excludes cars and trucks links the downtown with suburbs, "serves and benefits neighborhood comprised of many lower-income families dependent largely on bus transportation," said state Senator James Romanelli.
In Hartford, Conn., the city's Revitalization Corps of Hartford hosted a memorial service in King's honor as the state prepared to celebrate a state holiday dedicated to the slain civil rights leader.
State Treasurer Henry Parker, the state's highest elected black official, said that through King the nation will honor "the achievements of all Americans of all colors who seek the America he dreamed of—an America that lives out the true meaning of its creed."
While most Americans talked of King's ideals, Sen. John Daniels, D-New Haven, said

King's dreams have yet to be realized. "As I look around, I'm somewhat discouraged," Daniels said.
"Poverty and unemployment is higher today than 20 years ago and blacks have less of a chance to get decent and affordable housing."
In Atlanta, King was remembered at a testimonial dinner Saturday night as a leader who believed peace could be achieved through humanitarian rather than military means.
Former President Jimmy Carter was the featured speaker at the dinner honoring Atlanta Mayor Andrew Young.
"He, like Martin Luther King Jr., was never able or willing to compromise principle," said Carter. "The principles that have guided these two men have been the principles that have guided our nation."
Young was a King lieutenant in the Southern Christian Leadership Conference of the 1960s.

Wolf home threatened

United Press International
TENINO, Wash. — If the financial drain at the 30-acre sanctuary for wolves called Wolf Haven gets any worse, the organization may be in trouble.
Where once the non-profit sanctuary accepted all wolves without question, a lack of funds is threatening the operation.
The 25 wolves at the sanctuary in mid-December came from state agencies in Washington and New York, an abandoned private animal farm, individuals and Cornell University.

Feeding and caring for the animals, plus the monthly $500 rent for the sanctuary land are draining the organization's meager treasury.
Stephen Kuntz, Wolf Haven president, said all the help at Wolf Haven is volunteer and money is very scarce.
Kuntz said his wife works to support the family. Jack Laufer, wildlife biologist for the project, said he is living off savings that will soon be exhausted.

Food for the 25 wolves at the sanctuary comes from neighboring farms. Kuntz explained farmers are more than willing to donate dead cattle to the project.
"You'd be surprised how many cows die around here," he said. "So far, feeding the wolves has been the least of our problems."
When asked why he got into the wolf sanctuary business, Kuntz said it was from love of the animals. He said he always has been fascinated by wolves and once raised one in Colorado.
Kuntz, who was a home builder before coming to Wolf Haven, seethes at what he considers the undeserved bad reputation of wolves.
"There have been few documented cases where a wolf has killed a human being," he said.

Investigations following reported incidents have usually found the culprit was a wolf-dog or wolf-coyote cross, Kuntz said.
He said an ultimate goal of Wolf Haven is to re-introduce wolves into the wild where they numbered in the millions during the early 1800s.
Now the total wolf population in the lower 48 states is about 1,200, Kuntz said, with another 10,000 estimated in Canada and Alaska.
