Queries answered by EPA

United Press International

BROWNSVILLE — The Environmental Protection Agency plans to answer this week concerns expressed by a Mexican Government agency over a proposal to burn 300,000 metric tons of toxic wastes aboard incineration ships in the Gulf of Mexico, an EPA spokeswoman said Monday.

Wendy Grieder, with the EPA's office of international affairs, told the Brownsville Herald that the possibility of a spill and whether the hazardous wastes would be completely destroyed are among questions raised in a letter to the U.S. Embassy in Mexico City.

Budget is major concern

Barton declares candidacy

By KAREN WALLACE
Staff Writer

Joe Barton, Project Control Consultant for Atlantic Richfield Oil and Gas Company in Dallas, announced Monday night his candidacy for the United States Congress from the Sixth Congressional District.

Barton, who stopped in Bryan-College Station on his two-day press tour, said his major concern is controlling the national budget to reduce federal spending.

And, he said, two steps must be followed in order to control the budget.

The first step involves passing a Constitutional Amendment balancing the federal budget, he said. The second includes passing legislation giving the President a line item veto — a veto which allows him to take and delete separate items of the same piece of legislation, he said.

Barton said these two steps are a must if the nation wants to recover from the deficit.

Barton, who graduated from Texas A&M in 1972 with a bachelor's degree in industrial engineering, said his type is needed in Congress.

Joe Barton, 6th District Congressional candidate

"I think we need a few engineers in Congress," he said. "That would help find out what makes the country tick."

Barton, 34, was one of the 14 White House Fellows chosen in 1980. The Fellows program gives young adults first-hand experience with the federal government.

He was the first Texan chosen by President Reagan and the third Texas A&M graduate ever chosen for the program.

Barton said that as a fellow working in the Energy Department, he noticed there were no procedures controlling travel costs and under former President Carter's administration, $40 million was spent on travel alone, he said.

He recommended that the department's travel costs be examined to find out where all the money was going.

"I wanted to help save money for the government," Barton said.

Barton said once implemented, his recommendation led to an $8 million savings.

After working on the travel budget, Barton worked with the President's Private Sector Survey on Cost Control. This group of businessmen was asked by the President to look at the day-to-day operation of the federal government from a businessman's point of view, he said.

"If all of the recommendations on that report were implemented, up to $400 billion would be saved," he said.

Barton said he believes he has the qualities Texans want in a Congressman. They want someone who can relate to Texans, who knows how Washington works, and who has "real world" business experience and leadership ability, he said.

Finals

Dr. William H. Bassichis, an associate professor of physics, said many students feel that the faculty is "anti-undergraduate." He said passage of the resolution, considering this perspective by some students, would be a step in the wrong direction.

Student Senate Speaker David Alders and Student Body President Joe Jordan both were allowed to address the Faculty Senate about the policy.

Alders, who is the Student Senate representative to the Faculty Senate, said the current policy may not contribute to scholarship and learning, but it also does not detract from them.

In response to the charge that some students take a large number of courses their final semester, Alders said many seniors suddenly find they need more hours to graduate than they had realized. So many students "load" their last semester rather than postpone their graduation.

He said if graduating seniors are required to take final exams at the same time as other students, participation in graduation ceremonies will inevitably decline.

"Commencement will necessarily have to be held at a time when faculty and students are away on vacation," Alders said.

Jordan also stressed the inevitable decline in graduation participation if the new policy should be put into effect.

Jordan told the Senate that he believes the number of instances seniors take advantage of the system is exaggerated.

Problems such as declining class attendance are problems of classroom management and not of the present policy, he said.

Alders questioned the fairness of the questionnaire used in the academic standards committee's report. In the questionnaire faculty members were asked to choose from a list of six problems concerning the present policy. But they had to list advantages in space provided.

Although Alders and Jordan disagreed with the resolution, both commended the Senate's efforts to improve academic standards at Texas A&M.

In other business, the Faculty Senate also approved a resolution proposed by the Senate's parking committee. The resolution offers several recommendations about parking, such as providing assigned faculty parking "reasonably close to work space at a reasonable cost to all faculty staff," developing a shuttle bus system available to faculty and staff both on and off-campus and encouraging non-automobile commuting to campus. The committee also recommended the study of multi-story parking lots.

The resolution will be sent to President Vandiver for consideration.

aid he will continue to push for an investigation.

"If the Attorney General can't find any misuse of state funds, we plan to go to the House and Senate and if nothing happens there we'll go to the legislative budget board and try to change the funding procedures," Seal said.

Seal said that because Texas A&M is an agricultural school, it shouldn't advocate Reaganomics.

"Reaganomics caused the worst agricultural depression since 1933, and if agricultural economic professors from A&M are using state money to advocate Reagan, then they seem to be advocating a farmer go broke policy. Texas A&M should be there to help farmers, not hurt them."

Nichols said that if Seal would look at all the information produced by Knutson and the other program workers, he would see a full range of options.

"We present the information as unbiased and straightforward as possible," Nichols said. "We don't advocate any certain policies."
