Teenager commits suicide after confessing to murder

United Press International

FORT WAYNE, Ind. — A high school dropout who police charged in the murders of a newspaperman and his family Tuesday hanged himself in jail, leaving notes claiming "I haven't killed nobody" and "the good die young."

Police say Calvin D. Perry III, 18, confessed to a string of area break-ins, stabbings and rapes — and the bludgeoning deaths of Fort Wayne News-Sentinel editorial page editor Dan Osborne, his wife and son Sept. 17.

Allen County Coroner Dr. Roland Ahlbrand said Perry left notes claiming he was innocent.

Perry had scribbled "cryptic" messages in pen on the cell walls and, with hand lotion, wrote "something about 'the good die young'" on the floor, Ahlbrand said. The coroner said Perry also left a "detailed"

note on legal-sized paper asking forgiveness from a number of unidentified people and claiming "I haven't killed nobody."

Perry's suicide came the day after he was charged with three counts of murder and with rape, child molesting and burglary in the deaths Sept. 17 of Osborne, 35, his wife, Jane, 34, and son, Ben, 11.

A daughter, Caroline, 2, was sexually assaulted and beaten, but survived. She is living with relatives in Kansas. A minister who visited Perry last week said the suspect feared for his life.

"I talked with Mr. Perry (last week)," said the Rev. James Fincher, pastor of Faith Missionary Baptist Church. "He said, 'Reverend, there is something going on down here and I'm afraid for my life.' He made it crystal clear to me that he was afraid for his life."

The police department has no immediate comment.

Allen County Jail guards discovered Perry's body while serving breakfast to prisoners just before 7:30 a.m. EST.

Perry was found hanging from the bars of a window in his unguarded maximum security cell by a strip of cloth ripped from a mattress cover.

"The man had no shoes on. He had no belt. He had all the usual precautions which are done to avoid the sort of thing," Ahlbrand said. "There isn't a way in the world that anyone, any place, can prevent a suicide if the person is intent upon doing it."

Perry was arrested late in 1983 after a 78-year-old woman was beaten and robbed. Perry said he confessed to a series of crimes as far back as August, and to the Osborne slaying.

New center will take wider view on policies

United Press International

WASHINGTON — A new policy center headed by a former Agriculture Department economist will evaluate agricultural policies from a viewpoint broader than that of the farm sector, a research organization announced Tuesday.

Resources for the Future, a 32-year-old policy research organization, launched The National Center for Food and Agricultural Policy with a $4.5 million five-year grant from the W.K. Kellogg Foundation of Battle Creek, Mich.

Kenneth Farrell, former administrator of the Economics and Statistics Service of the Agriculture Department, will head the Washington-based center.

"One of the major shortcomings of U.S. agricultural policy has been the tendency of Congress and the executive branch to tailor legislation to meet narrow, special interest, farm sector needs or to consider future needs in only a limited manner," Farrell said.

"But today's agricultural issues go far beyond the farm. They affect every American."

Farrell said the center will advocate specific policies but develop relevant background information that can be used by the administration and Congress to develop policy. Part of the center's work will be geared toward consideration of the next four-year farm bill, 1985, but the work will go beyond that.

Agriculture Secretary James Block, at a news conference, announced the new center, saying "We will be listening. We will be inviting input from the center. I'm optimistic about the quality of work that will be coming out of the center."

Block, who has been directed by President Reagan to develop suggestions for long-term agricultural policy, said he believed that the government should provide "some limited stability" for farmers but should not guarantee farmers' income.

He said economic assistance should perhaps be directed toward individual farmers who need rather than linked to crop production with price supports. Block said the United States is virtually the only nation in the world with a farm policy that encourages farmers not to produce crops.

Maybe farmers should have commodity loans from banks rather than from the government, he said.
