‘Power for Living’ stirs up controversy

United Press International
TYLER—Three original authors of a religious book — touted by Dallas Cowboys coach Tom Landry and singer Pat Boone before publication — say the rewritten version plundered the original and diluted the theology in the process.

David Chilton, who co-authored the first edition of “Power for Living,” denounced the abridged version as containing “a very defective version of Christianity” in a report appearing in Sunday’s Dallas Morning News.

Florida minister Jamie Buckingham, who rewrote the book, said he feared the controversy surrounding publication will defeat its purpose.

“I’m concerned that this project could degenerate into a theological debate or a name-throwing situation,” Buckingham said.

Chilton said he was asked to finish the manuscript in four days, after the foundation behind the effort — American Vision Inc. — had already bought television advertising as part of the 1983 “Year of the Bible” evangelical campaign.

Backers shot television endorsements with Landry, Boone, Atlanta Falcons quarterback Steve Bartkowski and U.S. Sen. Bill Armstrong, R-Colo.

Some 2.5 million copies of the book were printed by the DeMoss Foundation. It was then that Chilton and co-authors Michael Gilstrap and the Rev. Ray Sutton discovered the Buckingham version had replaced the original.

Buckingham was listed as the sole author, although substantial parts of the original text had also been included. The original authors were also dismayed by what they perceived as a major shift in theology.

“I produced a piece of work for someone, and it was altered without my permission, and someone else’s name was placed on it, which we call plagiarism,” Sutton said. “And it’s the worst kind of plagiarism, since I wasn’t even quoted correctly. I was misquoted.”

Buckingham said the DeMoss Foundation asked him to rewrite the book to revise the literary construction, not the theology. He said he rewrote it, using the original as an outline.

After the revision was complete, the DeMoss Foundation asked that certain passages from the original text be included in the new version.

Newspaper bomb suspect released

United Press International
DALLAS — Police investigating the death of bombing death of a man killed by a booby-trapped newspaper rack said Sunday they intend to drop charges against the victim’s brother-in-law, who had been held as a prime suspect in the case.

A second suspect remained jailed in the death of Ward S. Keeton, 60, who was killed early Jan. 27 by a powerful bomb that went off in his face as he stepped out in his bathrobe to buy a Dallas Morning News.

Keeton’s brother-in-law Billy Jeff Cornett, a 35-year-old carpenter, was arrested last week at his home in League City, south of Houston. Investigators found materials in Cornett’s residence matching fragments of the bomb.

Cornett was released Saturday from Dallas County Jail, where he had been held under $250,000 bond. Police said they had confirmed Cornett’s charges would be dropped. “The (Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms) agents have talked to three citizens in League City who he was down there on the and not up here in Dallas during the time period we’re interested in,” said Police Sgt. Harold Williams.

Timing is a key element in the case. Police have established the bomb was planted less than an hour before Keeton bought the paper at roughly the same time every morning touched off the device.

Police continued questioning Keeton’s stepson, 21-year-old Marshall Dewayne Williams, security guard from Sulphur Springs, Mesquite.

Williams turned himself in to police the day before Cornett’s arrest, and was held for investigation under $50,000 bond.

Williams, who served 18 months in the U.S. Marine Corps, was described by acquaintances as having an interest in military matters.
