NEW YORK — In the best tradition of never-say-never, supporters of women's sports are willing to take on anyone who challenges their rights — even if the opponent is as awe-inspiring as the U.S. Supreme Court.

On Feb. 28, the court limited the scope of Title IX, which forbids sex discrimination in schools receiving federal aid. The law has been a key factor in the explosion in women's sports in schools across the country in the last decade.

"It's safe to say we're angry and dismayed at the decision," said Theresa Cusick, legislative associate with the project on Equal Educational Rights of the NOW Legal Defense and Education Fund.

"But," Cusick added, "I don't think women athletes in the colleges will simply give up without a fight."

Under the Nixon, Ford and Carter administrations, Title IX was interpreted to cover all areas of an institution receiving any type of federal money. But the Reagan administration argued Title IX affects only those departments or programs receiving federal aid — and the Supreme Court accepted that view.

'The danger (of the court ruling) is that the public will interpret it and say, 'It's OK to discriminate,' — The director of intercollegiate athletics for women at the University of Texas.

Since very few athletic programs receive federal aid, the logic of the court's ruling could have disastrous consequences for women's school athletics.

"The danger (of the court ruling) is that the public will interpret it and say, 'It's OK to discriminate,'" said Donna Lopiano, director of intercollegiate athletics for women at the University of Texas-Austin. Within hours of the Supreme Court decision, Sen. Bob Packwood (R-Ore.) introduced legislation that would overturn the court ruling and mandate that Title IX apply to all programs, including athletics, in a school receiving federal aid.

Rep. Claudine Schneider (R-R.I.) plans to introduce a similar bill, her office said, and believes it will pass. Last year the House approved 414-8 a resolution against restricting Title IX.

Title IX, passed in 1972 as part of the Education Amendments, is the only federal legislation prohibiting sex discrimination in education.

"When you look at where we were in 1972 and where we are today (in women's athletic programs), I think there's no doubt Title IX has been extremely important," says Lopiano.

In 1972, for example, there were no colleges or universities offering athletic scholarships for women. Ten years later, more than 800 schools made 15,000 scholarships available, according to Women's magazine.

In the high schools, the number of young women sports has increased from 10 percent to 35 percent of athletes since Title IX was enacted, according to the Equal Education Rights Washington, D.C. Women's account for about 30 percent of college-level athletes.

Luckily, women athletes have a number of factors on their side in their fight to make Title IX.

Glass breaks 'Border' record

Aggie track team places second

LAREDO — The Texas A&M men's track team, trying for its sixth Border Olympics university division championship in eight years, was dethroned by Lamar Saturday at Laredo's Shirley Field.

The Aggies, defending champions at the border meet, could only muster 104 points while Lamar, with six first-place finishes, ended the day with 124 points. Texas Tech finished third in the meet with 80 points and the University of Texas took fourth with 66.

Texas A&M ended the day with four first-place and five second-place finishes.

The Aggies' biggest finish of the day may have been in the high jump. A&M took first, second and fourth place in that event, setting a new meet record in the process.

Ethan Glass, defending high jump champion at the border, jumped 7-2 to win first place and set a new Border Olympics record. He broke the old record of 7-1½ set by A&M's Jim Howard in 1979. Chuck Perry, who has qualified for the NCAA indoor meet in the high jump, took second and Ernie Mendez finished in fourth place.

In the other field events, junior Kurt Thome won first in the triple jump with a distance of 48-2½ and also placed sixth in the long jump. In the javelin, senior Juan de la Garza placed second with a throw of 251-11 and pole vaulter Mark Rutledge cleared 15-6 to place second in that event.

The Aggie distance runners were out in full force and made their presence known Saturday. In the 1500-meters, Andy Elliott took second with a time of 3:56.49 and Aaron Ramirez placed sixth.

took first place in the 1100-meter hurdles with a 14:34.00. Chappelle Henderson, another hurdler, ran a 4:40 in the 400-meters to finish behind Lamar's Jackie Moody also placed fourth in the 400-meter intermediate hurdles.

James Washington, who has a chance to do well in the meter dash, pulled up and did not finish the race.

A&M's 400-meter relay team of Larry Derr, James Watson, Vernon Robertson and Tommy Alsbrooks placed fourth with a time of 4:11.50. The 1600 ½-meter relay team of Wesley and Bill Shelton placed fourth with a 3:30.00 clocking.

The Aggies were disappointed without some key individuals the border meet. Sprinter Richardson and quarter miler Tony Grier were resting in the NCAA indoor meet next end.

But the big sweep for the Aggies came in the 5000-meter run where they placed first, fourth and fifth. Junior college transfer Arturo Barrios, a strong candidate for the Mexican national team, breezed his way to a first-place finish with a time of 14:36.62. Aaron Ramirez placed fourth with a time of 14:52.31 and Aggie freshman Huey Treat followed with a fifth-place time 15:01.45.

In the other running events, senior hurdler Craig Moody

Gunslingers play Gamblers tonight

SAN ANTONIO — A week ago the fans at Alamo Stadium stood and cheered the San Antonio Gunslingers as they walked off the field, even though they had lost their inaugural United States Football League game.

This week the Gunslingers might need a win to keep those cheers alive.

San Antonio plays its second home game in as many weeks tonight, hosting the Houston Gamblers in what the two teams hope will become one of the new league's better rivalries.

Both teams are looking for their first win in a game to be shown nationally on television. Cool, blue weather is forecast for the test.

The expansion teams played representative showings last week, but San Antonio fell to the New Orleans Breakers, 13-10, and Houston was nipped by the Tampa Bay Bandits, 20-17.

And if the gusty winds advertised in the forecasters will be less than pleased.

Both quarterback Rick Neuheisel (who made his pro debut after having played his college ball at UCLA) and place kicker Nick Mike-Mayer blamed the winds last week for their loss to that cost San Antonio a chance for victory.

Neuheisel threw an interception late in the fourth quarter that sailed with the breeze. Mike-Mayer said the breeze caused a 27-yard field goal in the second quarter to be wide.

"It seemed like the kick was going right down the middle," Mike-Mayer said. "Then the wind like they (New Orleans) dered that gust of wind."
