

Senior yell leaders

Junior

TOM KING
Major: Marketing/Economics

Last year, while campaigning for junior yell leader, of all the different situations and reactions from people I encountered, one stands out among the rest. Going door-to-door in one of the girls' dorms, I was greeted by a young lady. I started to talk to her about who I was and that I was campaigning for junior yell leader. She immediately cut me off and asked the simple question I remember so well. "Are you in the Corps," she plainly asked? After telling her the answer she already knew, I was informed that I could leave her room. Sure, I agree that this was a rare and one of the few times that someone had been so direct, but the thought bugged the heck out of me. Talking to a class, I was asked if I would cut my hair. My response was that just as other past non-reg yell leaders had cut their hair, so would I. The question I keep asking myself was why are people so afraid of a non-reg yell leaders? Non-regs didn't hurt the 12th Man kick-off team. Non-regs didn't hurt anything when one of the guy dorms quaded a yell leader after a game. Non-regs don't seem to hurt fish camp.

I, like many other Aggies, care about the school I attend. I am presently on the dorm council of Hart hall, along with designing our dorm t-shirt. In the past, I've been involved with Political Forum, Great Issues, and Central Area Judicial Board, Young Life Leadership training, the Big Event, Bonfire and dorm intramurals. The Corps is certainly a great asset to A&M, yet there are 32,000 other students who deserve the same opportunity to represent our school.

My opinion is that a yell leader needs to be both an ambassador and a motivator. It's obvious that a yell leader's role is to create enthusiasm and motivation, but the role of representing the University is just as important. His appearance and actions are a reflection of both himself and Texas A&M.

I feel that the two most important characteristics a yell leader must have are pride and desire. I take pride in being a member of the Corps of Cadets and more importantly, a student here at

TERRY HLAVINKA
Major: Agricultural Economics

Serving as yell leader this past year is the greatest honor that I could have achieved while at A&M. I am seeking re-election with the desire to represent the entire student body for another year.

A year of experience is an invaluable tool for a Senior Yell Leader. In addition, my devotion to organizations such as the Corps, the MSC, and the Ross Volunteers has provided an abundance of experience in working with fellow Aggies.

As a yell leader, my primary objective is to induce more support for the entire athletic program — not just the football team. With a mere 1,500 in attendance for a playoff game with t.u., G. Rollie White can hardly live up to its media image as the "Hollar Box on the Brazos"!

If re-elected, I will make an honest effort to drum up enthusiasm for the "Twelfth Man" and that Fightin' Texas Aggie Spirit. Gig 'em!

SCOTT STROM
Major: Building Construction

My name is Scott Strom. I am a Building Construction major from Richardson, Texas and I would like to represent you and Texas A&M as a senior yell leader next year! This honor would mean a great deal to me since my life has revolved around Texas A&M, its traditions, and its friendly people.

I am a member of the Corps of Cadets and have participated in the Traditions Council, Fish Camp counseling, TAMU Ice Hockey Team and Aggie Bonfire where I served as a Redpot in charge of the construction of this symbolization of Aggie Spirit, Tradition, Unity, and Pride. If elected my one guarantee is that I will give 150 percent towards representing Aggie Traditions and keeping the 12 Man fired up enough to lead Aggie teams to victory!

DAVID LAWHORNE
Major: Business

My participation in various student activities has given me the experiences of working with others in all areas of student life at Texas A&M. I am presently vice president of the class of '86, active in Town Hall, Parent's Weekend Committee and Fish Camp.

I truly love and believe in Texas A&M and I have a strong commitment to our school. As a yell leader, I would display a positive and enthusiastic influence for the

KELLY JOSEPH
Major: Agricultural Economics

My dad was a head yell leader in '51 and I've wanted to be a yell leader for as long as I can remember. Aggie-land has so much to offer and as a fish camp chairman, through Student Government, and as a junior yell leader I've had an opportunity to work with the world's most active student body. I'd like to see A&M regard her traditions as an opportunity to be unique, to be better and use them to have fun instead of regarding them as laws. A yell leader's job is to promote those traditions and support out athletics program. He's required to represent A&M

RUSS STEVEN KOTWAL
Major: Health education

I feel that I have a definite motivational quality that I care to share with the rest of the student body. I have been in the Aggie band and Corps of Cadets for three years now, in which I have been instilled with an enormous pride and a drive to keep up the motivation and traditions of Texas A&M. Having worked with many of the handicaps on campus, I have also directly provided my services in an area which demands a lot of motivation and spirit. If elected I will try to bring a new height of spirit and motivation to the student body, as well as by representing Texas A&M in the best possible way — in being a soldier, statesman and knightly gentleman.

MIKE HACTMAN
Major: Industrial Distribution

I am running for junior yell leader because I feel that I am the most qualified candidate to represent the entire student body both on and off the field.

My goals for this office are twofold: 1) To uphold the traditions of TAMU by unifying the student body; and 2) To better represent all areas of life at A&M. My background of service to the University proves that I can and will implement these goals.

Having been a member of the Student Senate and the Singing Cadets for two years provides me with experience

RANDY COOK
Major: Business management

Texas A&M is full of traditions and spirit. The pride we have in our University is exemplified by our loyalty to those traditions and our overflowing enthusiasm as members of the Twelfth Man. A yell leader is responsible for insuring all Aggies that our traditions are upheld and our motivation as members of the Aggie family continues to burn bright.

My various involvements in the University have introduced me to a wide variety of people. I am a member of Town Hall, Muster committee and a chairman for Fish Camp '84. I have also been a member of the traditions committee and executive aides. As a member of the Corps of Cadets and Wing staff, I have committed myself to the responsibilities of being a part of A&M.

If elected, I hope I can introduce everyone to the pride in being able to say, "We are Aggies."

THOMAS BUFORD
Major: Agricultural Economics

Howdy, my name is Thomas Buford and I am seeking the office of junior yell leader. Becoming a yell leader at Texas A&M has been a goal I have dreamed of since my first Aggie football game at the age of seven. I feel yell leaders are very important because they represent Texas A&M at every
