Auction to sell surplus property

By LYNN RAE POVEC Reporter

Texas A&M will auction surplus property to the public Saturday beginning at 10 a.m. at the surplus property warehouse on Agronomy Road.

The surplus property department, which handles all equipment released by University units, holds an auction about twice a year.

"This will be the fourth year that we've done it," said Doyle Robertson, assistant stores manager in charge of surplus property. "In the past we've used a sealed bid sale."

Robertson said an auction is more profitable because bidders are face-to-face and therefore more competitive than when in a sealed bid sale. A sealed bid sale usually takes 30 days, so a one-day auction is more practical, he said.

The biggest sellers at past auctions have been vehicles, Robertson said.

Vans, station wagons, pickup trucks and scooters will be offered Saturday. Bidding on them will begin about noon.

Equipment is stocked in the warehouse ready for Saturday's auction.

Anyone interested in buying office equipment, lab equipment and furniture will find a large selection at the auction. Included are 50 chests of drawers, more than a dozen adding machines, 30 to 40 typewriters and several microscopes.

Couches, a manure spreader, cameras, a drafting table, tape recorders, a beef carcass saw, hard hats, televisions, two computers and two V-8 engines also will be for sale.

I. B. Bienski, who supervises the warehouse, said a stuffed, two-headed calf sold for $30 at the last auction.

"I had it here in the office," he said. "It was a pretty good conversation piece for as long as I had it."

Bienski said a complete list of the items to be auctioned Saturday may be picked up at the Stores and Purchasing Building on Agronomy Road. He said he expects about 250 bidders at the auction, which will end at 4 p.m.

The warehouse will remain open for about two hours so that buyers can pick up their purchases, but they also will have five working days after the auction to do so.

The auction is being handled by Art King, Bryan auctioneer.

King is responsible for setting up the items, tagging them with a lot number, advertising the auction and handling the money, Robertson said.

"Of course the auctioneer is going to try to get as much as he can for (an item)," Robertson said. "He gets a percentage of it."

Robertson said King will keep 9 percent of the profits. The surplus property department will receive the remainder of the money.

Items to be sold will be available for inspection at 8 a.m. Saturday.

Corps march to benefit the area March of Dimes

By LESLIE MARTIN Reporter

The Corps of Cadets makes up only about 5 percent of the student population at Texas A&M but to the Brazos Valley March of Dimes this small percentage is worth big bucks, more than $32,000 to be exact.

That's the amount that the cadets donated to the charity last year after their annual March to the Brazos. They hope to raise even more for this year's march on Saturday.

"We get more pledges each year and this time our goal is $35,000," says Philip Leopold, March project coordinator.

The March to the Brazos began in 1908 as a day of recreation for the cadets, but seven years ago the Corps Staff approached the March of Dimes with the idea of using the event as a fund raiser. The charity readily agreed, and since 1976, the Corp has raised more than $120,000.

"This march is the highest money raiser for the March of Dimes in the Bryan-College Station area," says Jane Massey, executive director for the Brazos Valley March of Dimes.

Prizes such as a personal computer and a walkman will be given away. The cadet that solicits the most pledges will receive a round trip plane ticket to Arkansas for the football game in the fall.

Someone else, in addition to the 2,000 Corps members, also will be getting pledges this year. Reveille IV.

"She has always gone on the march with us, but this is the first time that people have been able to sponsor her," says Murray Jones, a sophomore engineering technology major.

"The students really liked the idea of sponsoring her and they were more likely to give money if she was asking for a pledge," he says.

Jennifer Hubbard, a computer science major, suggested having sponsors. Reveille IV, and then she became interested. The cadet donated about $30. Reveille IV was a guest at their chapter dinner on Mar. 26.

The cadets will begin a seven mile march to the Brazos River at 8:30 a.m. While they will compete in athletic events and view various types of military equipment, Three Brazos Cowboy Cheerleaders will be there to participate in some of the events, sign autographs, and mingle with the cadets. The cadets should reach by 5 p.m.
