

Double suicide raises parents' fears again

United Press International
ARLINGTON — Police said Tuesday they fear two more teen suicides in the Dallas area may be part of a trend brought to national attention by eight suicides in the affluent suburb of Plano within a year.

The bodies of high school students Neil Risinger, 16, and Christopher Clower, 17, were found Monday in a field in the city west of Dallas. Police said the two teenagers apparently died in a double suicide.

Autopsies were being performed on the two.

Last year eight teenagers committed suicide in Plano, an affluent suburb north of Dallas.

Increased publicity about suicides tends to increase the number of attempts, said Catherine Geddie of the Arlington Crisis Intervention Center.

A police spokesman said suicides in Arlington had increased by 300 percent this year.

"There has definitely been an increase in suicides and suicide attempts in the Arlington area," said police Capt. Bobby Wiggins. "We have been watching very carefully what has been happening in Plano and it appears that there is a trend of increased suicides among young people."

Arlington police said each of the Sam Houston High School students was shot in the head. A small caliber pistol and suicide note were found in the truck. Contents of the note were not released.

Wiggins said Arlington police are preparing statistics on suicides and suicide attempts in their city and will cooperate with community organizations to increase their efforts at suicide prevention.

"There were about 30 suicides in Arlington last year," he said, "out of 116 attempts. So far this year we have had seven suicides, which is a 300 percent increase over the suicides at this time last year. The percentage may be misleading, but the number of suicides is definitely increasing."

Arlington Mayor Harold E. Patterson said the city council will cooperate with community efforts to step up suicide prevention programs. "We'll do all we can to protect our citizens," he said.

Geddie said the Arlington crisis intervention line has been successful at convincing desperate callers to seek further help. Since its inception, volunteer listeners have failed only three times to talk a caller out of committing suicide, she said.

The role of the telephone listener, she said, is to offer an alternative to the would-be suicide and assure the person that "someone else cares."

$500,000 bond set for alleged spy

United Press International
ALEXANDRIA, Va. — A federal judge set bond at $500,000 Tuesday for a "decent Mormon" who, the government claims, betrayed six U.S. double agents working for the Soviet KGB and has enough information to sell as many as two dozen more.

U.S. District Judge Albert Bryan Jr. set the bond for Richard Craig Smith, 40, of Bellevue, Wash., a former Army counterintelligence specialist, despite prosecutors' fears that he might try to peddle more information.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Joseph Aronica told Bryan that as a result of Smith's alleged betrayal, "some of our KGB agents have been neutralized."

Aronica said later he did not mean to imply that the double agents working for Soviet intelligence had been killed.

"He gave up six double-agent operations along with disclosing other intelligence personnel. He has had regular access to a tremendous amount of classified material," Aronica said. "He has knowledge of between 20 and 30 double-agent operations, including the six he gave up."

Smith was indicted Monday on five counts of conspiracy and espionage — three of which carry a maximum penalty of life in prison.

Smith's attorney, William Cummings, argued his client would not flee the country because he is a devout Mormon and has "13 years of impeccable government service."

The indictment said Soviet spy Victor Okunev, listed as second secretary at the Russian Embassy in Tokyo, paid Smith $11,000 for information about Army intelligence operations to infiltrate the Soviet intelligence agency, the KGB, and promised up to $150,000 for future disclosures.

While meeting Okunev in Tokyo in November 1982 and February 1983, Smith divulged information about the command's double-agent operations, code-named "Landscape Breeze," "Canary Dance," "Hole Punch," "Lariat Toss" and "Royal Miter," the grand jury charged.

Authorities indicated Royal Miter was the most important of the betrayed operations, although there was no indication why.

In Tokyo, a Foreign Ministry official said the Japanese government was "still in the process of reviewing the case" to see whether Okunev should be expelled.

Soviet Embassy officials in Tokyo called the charges "utterly groundless."

Smith, the son of a Mormon bishop and a father of four, declared bankruptcy in 1982 after leaving the Army intelligence command. The indictment claims Smith first contacted the Soviets in November 1982.

Book rates Hallmark Cards as one of 10 best employers

United Press International
KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Hallmark Cards Inc., the nation's leading greeting card company, ranked as one of the best 10 companies to work for in America, according to a book to be released next month.

Marion Laboratories Inc., another Kansas City-based firm, also made it into "100 Best Companies to Work for in America" by Robert Levering, Milton Moskowitz and Michael Satz.

The men started with more than 340 companies, then narrowed it to a list of 125. They then visited 114 companies in 17 states and talked to more than 1,000 employees.

The list does not give a numerical ranking of the top work places, Levering said.

Other companies in the top 10 are Bell Laboratories; Trammell Crow Co., a Dallas-based real estate company; Delta Air Lines; Goldman Sachs & Co., commercial-paper dealers; Hewlett-Packard Co., a manufacturer of electronic equipment; International Business Machines Corp.; Pitney Bowes Inc., a manufacturer of mailing equipment and business machines; Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co.; and Time Inc.

The companies were rated on pay, benefits, job security, chances for advancement and ambiance and were graded on a scale of one to five in each category — with one being the lowest score.

Hallmark received fives in the job security and ambiance categories, fours in chances for advancement and benefits and a three in the pay category.
