Pearson no-billed for wreck

United Press International
DALLAS — A Dallas County grand jury Tuesday decided not to indict Dallas Cowboys wide receiver Drew Pearson in connection with the March 22 automobile accident that killed his brother.

Pearson, 33, who was hospitalized about two weeks with a lacerated liver following the accident, announced early this month that he plans to resume his career with the Cowboys.

Pearson was driving his brother, Carey Pearson, 27, home about 1 a.m. March 22 when the athlete fell asleep at the wheel and smashed the car into the rear of a tractor-trailer truck parked on the shoulder of a north Dallas freeway.

Carey Pearson was declared dead at the scene. Drew Pearson suffered injuries to his liver that doctors said would take two or three months to heal.

Police said the case was routinely referred to the grand jury. The panel's no-bill means Pearson will not be charged in the incident.

Pearson earned his spot on the Cowboys after joining the team as a free agent in 1973. He was elected to three Pro Bowls in the late 1970s and was named to the All-Decade team. He was also voted the Cowboys' Man of the Year by Dallas fans in 1980.

Johnson ready for Oilers

Ex-Cowboy content

United Press International
HOUSTON — Butch Johnson, disgruntled in his eight seasons as a backup wide receiver for the Dallas Cowboys, said Tuesday he will be content to have a supporting role with the Houston Oilers.

Johnson said it was clear quarterback Warren Moon, acquired by the Oilers after his five successful seasons in the Canadian Football League, will be the star of the team.

"I've talked to Warren and he's very excited about helping turn the Oilers around and make winners out of them," Johnson said at a news conference. "I'm trying to win the best supporting role."

The Oilers traded wide receiver Mike Renfro for Johnson and also traded positions in the second round of the upcoming NFL draft. Dallas will now pick 12th in that round and the Oilers, 26th.

'I'm trying to win the best supporting role' — new Oiler receiver Butch Johnson

Johnson said knowing now that he will be starting next season has made him more relaxed.

"I never was going to quit because of physical deterioration," he said. "The thing I'm going to end it for me is total deterioration."

"You groom your body where you're not playing and then they say, 'You can't play,' and that's frustrating."

Of his former team, he expected Dan Dierdorf would continue to be the starting quarterback but the Hogeboom "will be a new Butch Johnson" comes to making noise.

"Gary is a great coach and feels he's good enough to be playing, just like I do," said.

Mancini to boom-boom Bramble in boxing ring

By MILTON RICHMAN

Columnist for United Press International

The way I understand it, nobody can tell Livingstone Bramble anything. Who knows, maybe he's afraid he'll learn something.

They tell me the WBA's No. 1 lightweight challenger from Passaic, N.J., by way of the Virgin Islands raises Boa constrictors, pythons and pit bulldogs and is difficult for even his own manager, Lou Duva, to handle.

He's supposed to be unorthodox, march to his own bongo, be his own man and all that other prune juice that goes along with it.

It's obvious nobody ever talked to him about that ancient proverb: better 10 friends than one enemy. It's also obvious he couldn't care a fig if Ray "Boom Boom" Mancini, the WBA lightweight champion, ever turns out to be a friend of his or not. Mancini is making a mandatory defense of his title and Bramble will be trying to take it away from him in the War Memorial Auditorium at Buffalo, N.Y., June 1.

Bramble, a 4 to 1 underdog, already has made a mistake, one he really didn't have to make, and since nobody can tell him anything, it's probably pointless for anybody to caution him about an impending second one.

But it might be a good idea if he understands that hype to build up a fight is something, and transcending the bounds of common decency is something else again. Mancini, who doesn't over-react, believes Bramble has exceeded those bounds.

"I want him to know one thing," Mancini says. "We'll be going up to Buffalo soon, before the fight, and I'm not looking to start any trouble, but if he pulls that street spit on me again, talking about family and stuff like that, he won't be looking for me, I'll go looking for him at hotel or anywhere else, and so help me rip his juglar out."

It seems the trouble began in Buffalo when Mancini and Bramble both went there to kick off the fight. Bramble was talking to Mancini while the photographers were shooting them, and the conversation, according to Boom Boom, went like this:

Bramble: "Where do you come from?"

Mancini: "Ohio."

Bramble: "What part?"

Mancini: "Youngstown."

Bramble: You should come from Cleveland or Cleveland."

Mancini: "Why is that?"

Bramble: "Because they both got clubs and you could be the catcher."
