Gramm: campaigning positively for Senate seat

By KARI WEEKS

Phil Gramm showed confidence Friday at Easterwood Airport that he would win the GOP nomination for the Senate seat being vacated by Republican John Tower.

Gramm's confidence wasn't without merit, because he won the nomination with 73 percent of the vote.

This was 20 percent better than the most recent poll that showed Gramm with 53 percent of the people supporting him.

Gramm said Democratic Senate contender Bob Krueger was running stronger against him than either U.S. Rep. Kent Hance or state Sen. Lloyd Doggett.

Hance and Doggett edged Krueger Saturday in one of the state's closest primary elections, with fewer than 2,250 votes separating first-place Hance from third-place Krueger. Hance and Doggett face each other in a runoff June 2.

Gramm's press secretary, Larry Neal, said that besides showing Gramm as the front-runner the poll showed U.S.

Rep. Ron Paul with 17 percent, oilman Rob Mosbacher with 7 percent and gubernatorial nominee Hank Grover with 2 percent of the people supporting them.

"The senate race is important because the senate seat would be the only state-wide office held by Republicans," Gramm said. "It would determine whether we have a Democratic or Republican majority in the Senate and whether we have a base of support for our programs in Congress. And it is important that Texas has a strong voice in government."

He also said that he was the only candidate that has actually put together a winning combination of Republicans, independents and conservative Democrats before. That was when he chose to resign from Congress and run as a Republican candidate, Gramm said.

Gramm resigned his seat in Congress in 1982 to switch parties after he sided with President Reagan's economic policies, and went on to win reelection as a Republican.

"We don't know who our likely opponent will be,"

Gramm said Monday at a press conference in Lubbock. "It doesn't matter who the Democratic nominee is," he said of his campaign for Tower's seat.

"I'm not running against anybody in this race," Gramm said, adding he would run a positive campaign between now and November based on his congressional experience.

"I believe I can follow the tradition of John Tower ... of assuring our voice will be heard in a Reagan White House," Gramm said.

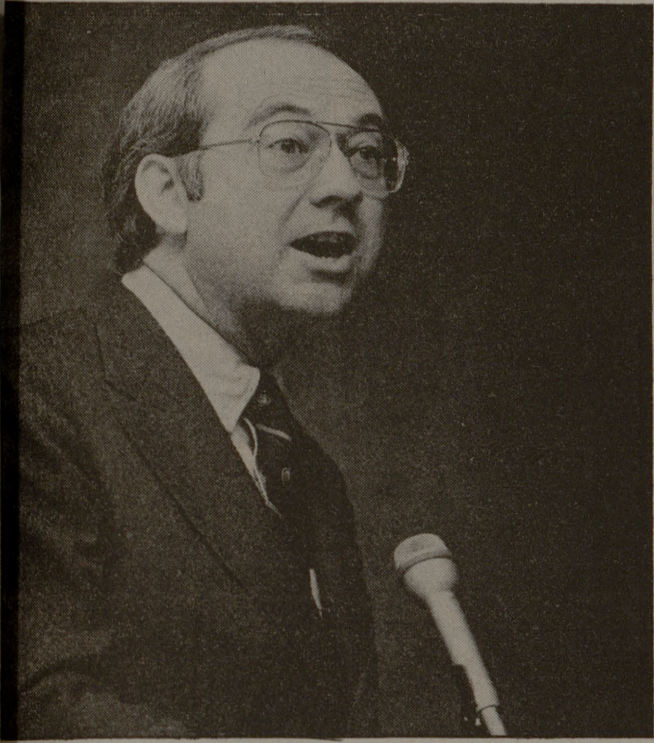

He said that half of some 1,500 people attending his primary victory party in College State have voted for the first time in a Republican primary.

Besides being able to put together a winning combination for the general elections in November, Gramm said that he has helped to bring the inflation rate to a stand still and create jobs for 500 million people. Of those jobs he said that 515 thousand were in Texas alone.

It is on these previous accomplishments, his opposition to amnesty for aliens and employer sanctions that Phil Gramm will continue his campaign for the Senate.
