Sheehan shares the 'good life'

United Press International
 MALVERN, Pa. — When Patty Sheehan says, "I'm having a pretty good life," no one doubts her in the least.
 After her victory Sunday in the $350,000 LPGA Kids' Classic, Sheehan leads the 1984 women's tour in victories, three, and official money winnings at $164,982.
 The tournament was sponsored by McDonald's Corp.
 But it isn't just the money. The 27-year-old Californian showed gritty determination in the saunlike conditions at the White Manor Country Club to outduel Amy Alcott Sunday in the final round. In addition to Alcott, there was the pressure of a $500,000 bonus that was pecking away at her concentration.

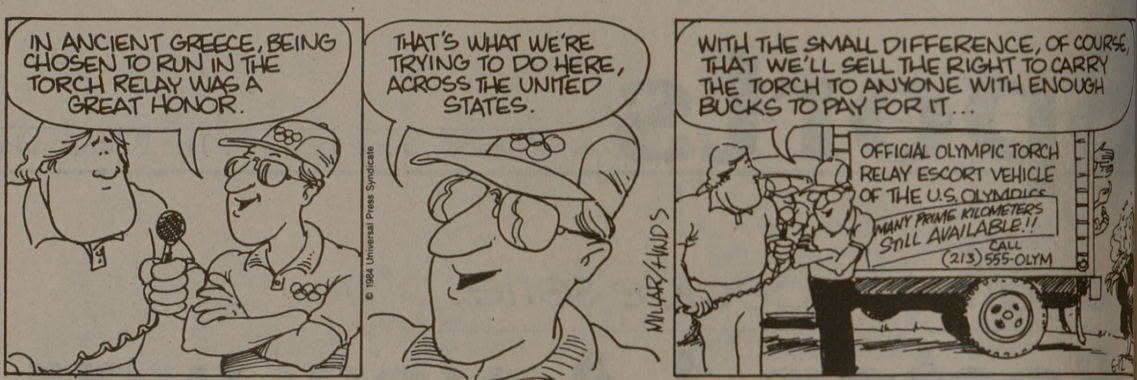

Away from golf, Sheehan also has a keen awareness of her life and those around her. Her involvement with a home for troubled teenaged girls in northern California means as much to her as the money and recognition she gets from golf.
 The facility, known as "Tigh Sheehan" which means "House of Sheehan" in Gaelic, offers counseling and education in a home environment. She purchased the house two years ago.
 "I'm having a pretty good life and I'd like to share it with others who aren't so fortunate," said Sheehan, sipping champagne Sunday after collecting the $52,500 first-prize check and the bonus.

"I'm real fortunate to be able to give back a little bit. I picked it (Tigh Sheehan) because it's close and I can see the progress the kids are making. There are quite a few real success stories and it means a lot to me to know that maybe I had something to do with them. The house is a very special part of my life."

Another special part of her life came Sunday when she took home what officials said was the biggest one-day payout in the history of professional golf. The $500,000 bonus was awarded to Sheehan for her victories here and in the LPGA Championship the previous weekend.

"This is a thrill that ranks up there with my first tour victory (a 1981 event in Japan), my first major (the 1983 LPGA) and my first half-million dollars in winnings," she said. "It's nice to know I'll have a nice retirement."
 The bonus money, put up by sponsors of this tournament, the LPGA and the Corning Classic, is payable in 10 yearly installments of $50,000 each beginning in 1994.

Simpson takes usual position at U.S. Open

United Press International
 MAMARONECK, N.Y. — The star of the show a few miles down the road, Scott Simpson took on his more familiar role as just another anonymous face in the crowd Monday when golfing's elite gathered for the U.S. Open.
 It is ludicrous, of course, to summarize a $500,000 tournament, but because of unfortunate scheduling, the Westchester Classic merely served as a tuneup to the grand show which starts Thursday at Winged Foot.

The distance between the Westchester Country Club and Winged Foot is little more than 5 miles, but many of the game's top names, such as Jack Nicklaus, Tom Watson, Ben Crenshaw, Hale Irwin and Lee Trevino, elected to bypass the Westchester to give themselves more preparation time for the Open.

For Simpson, though, the detour was well worth the trip and in his subdued, easy-going manner, winning the Westchester was just about as good as winning the Open. When you haven't been able to win anywhere on the circuit in four years, winning something is all that matters.

"I had about five second-place finishes since winning the Western (in 1980), but I couldn't quite get over the edge," Simpson said Sunday after his 6-under-par 65 gave him a five-stroke victory and the $90,000 first prize, only $4,000 less than the Open winner will earn. "I figured it would come around, and I'm glad it came around today."

The 28-year-old Californian knows full well the value of winning the Open, and it is a title he dearly would love to have, but Simpson isn't about to place added pressure on himself.

"I hate to say it, but if I don't play well or don't win it, it's not the end of the world," he said. "I've got a great wife, I've got a great little girl and I've got a great house in San Diego. I enjoy my golf, but I don't worry about it. I'm not rich by any means. I'm well off. It's just the satisfaction of winning."

From an original list of 5,199 entries for the 84th U.S. Open, a field of 156 will tee off early Thursday morning over the 6,930-yard Westchester Course. The total purse is $600,000.

This will be the fourth time the Winged Foot is hosting the Open. On the last occasion, in 1974, Watson took a one-shot lead into the final round but Irwin came on to win the first of his two national crowns with a 7-over-par 287, the highest winning score in relation to par since 1963.

Winged Foot, with its deep meadow and long and straight, and among the people who rate highly are Nicklaus, Watson, Crenshaw, Irwin, Tom Kite and Calvin Peete, who probably is the most accurate of all off the tee.

Ex-Cowboy sentenced to jail for sexual assault

United Press International
 LONG BEACH, Calif. — Former Dallas Cowboys linebacker Thomas "Hollywood" Henderson was sentenced Monday to five years in prison for sexually assaulting two teenage girls and offering them a bribe to stop them from testifying.
 Superior Court Judge Ernest Kelly could have sent Henderson, a two-time All-Pro linebacker, to prison for as long as 18 years.
 Kelly, who revoked Henderson's $16,000 bail, also recommended Henderson serve his four-year, eight-month sentence in a minimum security prison.

Henderson, a member of the Dallas Cowboys' Super Bowl teams in 1976, '78 and '79, pleaded no contest to four charges stemming from a November abduction and sexual assault on a 17-year-old quadriplegic and her 15-year-old girlfriend.
 The former football player, who retired in 1981, had also pleaded no contest to charges he offered the two girls a $10,000 bribe to testify he had not molested them.

In California, a "no contest" plea carries the same penalties as a guilty plea, but does not admit to guilt.
 Prosecutors said Henderson lured the two girls to his Long Beach apartment on Nov. 2, forced them at gunpoint to disrobe, subjected them to oral copulation and gave drugs to the teenagers.

Henderson originally claimed he picked up the girls after they were hit on the street. He claimed he pulled his unloaded handgun on the girls when he found out they were stealing his money.

The police confiscated a .38-caliber handgun from his residence.

Following his 1979 release from the Cowboys, Henderson disclosed he had a cocaine habit that cost him as much as $10,000 per week.

Detroit Tigers not just leading AL East

United Press International
 NEW YORK — The Detroit Tigers, who have held a large lead in the American League East for most of the season, have three players leading and another in second place in the first weekly report on voting for the All-Star team, the AL announced Monday.

The 1984 All-Star Game will be played on July 10 at San Francisco's Candlestick Park. Balloting continues through June 30 at all major and minor-league ballparks and at thousands of retail stores around the country.

Second baseman Lou Whitaker, catcher Lance Parrish and center fielder Ghet Lemon, three-fourths of Detroit's potent up-the-middle defense, are bidding for their first All-Star starts.

The fourth defensive stalwart, shortstop Alan Trammell, is runner-up to last year's AL Most Valuable Player, Cal Ripken Jr. of Baltimore.

Whitaker's closest pursuer is Toronto's Damaso Garcia, who has helped the Blue Jays to the second-best record in baseball. Parrish's main competition comes from Chicago's Carlton Fisk, a seven-time All-Star starter.

Two other leaders — California first baseman Rod Carew and Kansas City third baseman George Brett — are bidding to continue consecutive selection strings. Carew is seeking his 15th in a row while Brett is after his ninth.

Bill Buckner, traded on May 25 from the Chicago Cubs to Boston, ranks sixth among AL first basemen. His name appears on the National League side of the ballot, but so as not to deprive Buckner of votes received, his NL total and AL write-ins are being combined.

California's Reggie Jackson leads the outfield vote-getting, which is the tightest race of all. The 10-time electee is followed by Dave Winfield of New York and Lemon. Jackson's teammate Fred Lynn ranks fourth. Lynn, who hit the first All-Star grand slam last year, has four home runs and 10 RBI in his nine appearances.

These are the total number of votes that have been cast for each outfielder:

- 1, Reggie Jackson, California (DH), 245,728.
- 2, Dave Winfield, New York, 240,090.
- 3, Chet Lemon, Detroit, 213,076.
- 4, Fred Lynn, California, 199,977.
- 5, Ron Kittle, California, 186,124.
