Elderly woman dies of poison

United Press International

SAVOY — State and county officials Monday investigated the death of an elderly woman served cleaning solvent instead of juice at a nursing home that relatives of another patient complained is chronically understaffed.

At the order of Justice of the Peace Don Jones, investigators from the Fannin County sheriff's office, the district attorney's office and the Texas Department of Health Monday toured the 47-patient Savoy Nursing Home, located 60 miles north of Dallas, and questioned employees at the facility.

Dorie Emerson, 83, died Saturday afternoon at the Fannin County Hospital after being served two glasses of ChemCan, a red-colored cleaner apparently mistaken for cranberry juice, said hospital administrator Bill Johnson.

Emma Zuver, 57, also drank two glasses of the cleaning fluid for dinner Friday. She was reported in satisfactory condition Monday with second-degree burns in her mouth and throat, officials at the Texoma Medical Center in Denison said.

Five other women patients drank the cleaner, but did not require hospitalization.

All of those involved in the incident were total care patients who were unable to feed themselves, said Fannin County District Attorney Dan Meehan. The cleaner had only a slight odor and was the color and texture of red juice.

One of the two investigators from the health department, which licenses the state's 1,100 nursing homes, was a nurse who examined the five patients still at the home Monday and said they appeared to be in good condition.

Meehan, who stressed that he was conducting an inquiry rather than a criminal investigation, said he had no indications of a criminal act in the incident.

The solvent apparently was poured into a bottle that usually is used to serve cranberry juice to the residents.

GOP campaigns against White

United Press International

AUSTIN — Gov. Mark White's promise in 1982 that he would not raise taxes if elected governor will be splashed on billboards to remind voters of his broken campaign promises, the chairman of the Texas Republican Party said Monday.

George Strake of Houston said the billboard campaign is part of a "political educational effort" that will be mounted statewide to focus on the failures of White's administration.

Strake announced the campaign at a news conference held beneath a billboard near the state Capitol, which quoted White as saying: "... there will be no new taxes for Texans when I am governor."

White made the statement in an Oct. 10, 1982, interview with the Fort Worth Star-Telegram while he was running for governor, Strake said.

White, a Democrat, is proposing in the current special session of the Texas Legislature a three-year, $4.8 billion tax increase for education and highways. It would be the largest tax increase in the state's history and the first since 1971.

"This is the beginning of a campaign to point out some of the broken promises of Gov. White," Strake said. "We are hoping this will spur the taxpayers to put their hand over their wallet, take a look toward Austin and make sure these people are not going to spend them into oblivion."

Strake said Republicans are not opposed to education reforms, but he said the Legislature should first look for additional funds through cuts in the current budget.

"What we think can be done is to look for ways to save money in the current budget," he said. "We think teachers can have their pay raise. Maybe not 24 percent, but certainly a substantial pay raise."

Strake said the GOP had previously identified some $500 million in fat that could be trimmed from the state's two-year, $32 billion budget.

White has said he would not object to the current budget being reviewed, but he contends there is not enough time in the special session to go through the entire budget. The session ends July 3.

Strake said the Republican Party is not ruling out the possibility that new taxes will be needed, but he said budget cuts should be the first priority.

Woman says she was go-between

Baby smuggling testimony heard

United Press International

LAREDO — A woman testified Monday she was a go-between in a ring that located destitute pregnant women in Mexico and arranged to smuggle their babies into the United States for adoption by couples who paid up to $2,000.

San Juana Martinez Lopez, an unmarried mother of seven, told U.S. District Judge George Kazen she acted on instructions from Nelda Colwell, 39, of Layton, Utah, in arranging for a second woman to transport the Mexican babies across the Rio Grande from neighboring Nuevo Laredo, Mexico.

She said she also arranged for a third woman, a midwife, to falsify documents showing the babies were born in Laredo.

Colwell pleaded innocent to three counts of a federal grand jury indictment in the alleged baby-smuggling scheme and asked for a non-jury trial that began Monday.

Martinez and two other Laredo women pleaded guilty in Kazen's court last month and agreed to testify for the government.

Prosecutor David Almaraz said in his opening statement he would show that Colwell at first legally adopted newborn children in Mexico, but became "obsessed" with placing children in homes of "baby-starved parents" and about a year ago, began looking for shortcuts to get the infants across the border.

Almaraz said at least five Mexican babies were smuggled into Laredo and that midwife Juanita Melendez Calderon, who also pleaded guilty, falsely registered them as being born in Texas.

The Mexican mothers then went to Laredo attorney Sharon Trigo, who is helping Utah attorney George Handy defend Colwell, and signed relinquishment papers and began adoption procedures.

Martinez testified the adoptive parents paid all the fees.

She said she received $100 to $200 for helping locate the babies and asking the impoverished mothers if they wanted to give them up for adoption.

Handy said his client had no indication that the babies were brought into the country illegally and was only trying to operate a non-profit service to obtain babies for desperate parents in Utah.

"This is a story of people who had children and want children but can't have children," Handy said in his opening argument. "They were profited in any way except to bring people happiness."

However, one of the Mexican mothers who signed papers relinquishing her infant son last March has changed her mind and now she wants the baby back.

Five Ohio family members die in car collision

United Press International

SAVOY — Five members of an Ohio family making a new life in Texas died with the 2-year-old son of a friend in a head-on collision caused by an ex-convict and drug addict who was driving drunk, a highway trooper said Monday.

Authorities said the Sunday evening accident virtually wiped out the Crunkilton family of the Bellview, Ohio, area, leaving only 18-year-old David, who had remained in Ohio to graduate from high school. David's mother had died in February.

Also killed was a 2-year-old boy whose mother heard about the accident on the radio, raced to the scene and became hysterical when she saw her son dead on the road, officers said.

The accident happened on Highway 82 between Savoy and Ector, 60 miles north of Dallas, at about 6:40 p.m. Sunday.

Department of Public Safety trooper R.L. Dorrough said Jimmy Harrell Bilyeu, 29, of Savoy was driving with no license, no insurance and a cooler of beer in his van when he collided with a car driven by Harry Crunkilton of the Bellview, Ohio, area.

Bilyeu is in serious condition today at Texoma Medical Center in Denison, hospital officials said.

"I can prove he was on the wrong side of the road," the trooper said. "I'm waiting for blood and urine tests on the DWI."

"I could smell (liquor). I talked to him," said Dorrough, who said the accident would be referred to the Fannin County grand jury.

Dorrough said Bilyeu has served prison terms for burglary, larceny, forgery, fraud, drugs and escaping from prison. The trooper said Bilyeu's drug habit led to the amputation of both legs while he was in the Texas Department of Corrections.

and they got infected," Dorrough said. "They had to amputate."

Harry Crunkilton, 50, was killed in the collision, along with his 16-year-old son, Daniel, 8; his fiancée, Hattie Reed, 50; her son Albert G. Reed, 22; and daughter, Patricia Reed, 16, and John Reynolds, 2.

Dorrough said the Crunkilton family had moved to the area about six weeks ago and worked on a farm owned by Kenneth Breeding, whose car they were driving.

"They were going to the Reynolds house to take back the baby" after the collision, he said.
