

What's up

Wednesday

CHI ALPHA: Bible centered teaching on "Slothfulness and How to Overcome It" at 7 p.m. in 308 Rudder.

Thursday

CHI ALPHA: study on "Humanism - what it is not, what it is" at 7 p.m. in 308 Rudder.
CAMPUS CRUSADE FOR CHRIST: weekly Bible study and fellowship at 7 p.m. on the second floor of Rudder.

Beirut fighting flares despite Syrian accord

United Press International

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Scattered fighting flared in Beirut Tuesday despite a new Syrian-mediated accord on uniting Lebanon's Christian and Moslem factions and curbing the violence in the country.

Police sources said the fighting was mostly sporadic clashes between rival militiamen firing machine guns and rocket-propelled grenades along the Green Line separating the Moslem west from the Christian east of the capital.

Fighting also was reported between Palestinian and Moslem factions in west Beirut.

Moslem-controlled Mourabitoun radio said sniper fire wounded a young girl in the capital's Moslem sector.

The violence followed a visit Monday by Syrian Vice President Abdel Halim Khaddam, who persuaded feuding Christian and Moslem Cabinet ministers to agree on a broad outline for military and political reforms aimed at improving security in Beirut.

Khaddam's visit apparently broke a stalemate that had kept Prime Minister Rashid Karami's Cabinet from meeting since it won a vote of confidence in Parliament last Tuesday.

The official National News Agency said Karami's 7-week-old national unity Cabinet would meet Thursday to discuss the Syrian-mediated accord, which some Beirut newspapers said was merely an "agreement in principle."

The pact, named the "Bikfaya Accord" for the mountain village where Khaddam and government leaders met Monday, granted some of the Moslem majority's key demands for reform of Lebanon's Christian-dominated army and political system.

Christian Cabinet ministers are known to strongly oppose any relaxation of the Christian minority's grip on power, but Khaddam reportedly pushed through the agreement by persuading Moslems to moderate some of their demands.

Quarterback testifies in assault trial

United Press International

McKINNEY — Dallas Cowboys quarterback Danny White Tuesday testified he was "angry, upset" and feared for his children's lives when he slapped a teenage motorist and bloodied his nose.

"I was concerned with the safety of myself and my three children," White testified in his criminal assault trial.

"I feared bodily damage and death for any one of us."

Jon Michael Clark, a 205-pound high school football player, alleges that White forced his car off the road, threatened his life and punched him in the nose.

White, who faces a one-year jail sentence if convicted, claims he slapped, not punched Clark — and that the blow was delivered in self-defense.

He testified Clark was driving recklessly and appeared intent on following White home.

"I was angry, upset," White said. "I was getting pretty close to my home. It was obvious to me that he was going to follow me unless I did something."

White said he hopped out of his family van at an intersection and confronted Clark.

"I said to him 'Do you have a problem?' He (Clark) just smiled and replied 'No, I haven't got a problem.'"

Then White said he made his threat.

"I told him he almost got me and my kids killed. I told him if he ever threatens the lives of my kids (traveling in the van) again, I'll kill him."

White said he then slapped Clark across the bridge of his nose, and drove off.

In earlier testimony, Clark said he did not provoke White and did not expect to be hit.

"It was a quick punch. I never saw it coming," said Clark.

"He (White) came up to me and said 'What the hell do you think you're doing?'" Clark said. "White said 'If I see you on this road again I'll kill you. You understand, I will kill you.'"

"He (White) was very angry when he made those statements. He was red in the face and talking in a manner of speaking the words with clenched teeth."

"He then proceeded to punch me in the nose, punch me with his right fist, a clenched fist."

During cross-examination, Clark admitted White had not injured his jaw as earlier reported.

"The punch hurt me. I had a trickle of blood. But that was it," Clark said.

The teenager said he did not approach the White vehicle because he did not know who was inside.

Army GIs may correct dubious test records

United Press International

EL PASO — GIs who were disciplined on the basis of questionable urine tests for illicit drugs will receive letters from the U.S. Army beginning next week, telling them how to correct any injustices done them.

Soldiers now stationed at Fort Bliss were told today they could be among those receiving the letters if they were in the service when the tests were given in 1982 and 1983.

Maj. Donald Kerr, of the Army's drug and alcohol policy office in Washington, D.C., said the Army decided to send the letters after studying the results of more than 100,000 urinalyses taken at Army and Air Force laboratories between April 27, 1982 and Nov. 1, 1983.

Kerr said he could not identify all the posts affected by the letter, nor could he estimate the number of GIs who were disciplined on the basis of the tests.

Everyone who tested positive for illicit drugs will be sent a letter with information on how to correct the record, Kerr said.

The soldier, or former soldier, will also receive information on how to get help in filing the petition to correct the record, Kerr said.

The controversial urine analysis program has been under fire since the Army learned the urinalyses could not be used as evidence in courts martial, officials said. A blue ribbon panel was ordered to make a complete study of the problem.

After the panel's report in December, the Army instituted reforms in the system to ensure the urine tests would meet scientific and legal standards, Kerr said.

Breakdancing

Flashy new fad causes serious injuries

United Press International

CHICAGO — Doctors warned Tuesday the flashy fad of breakdancing can push the body beyond its endurance, causing torn ligaments, broken bones and more serious injuries. One man broke his neck and was left a quadriplegic.

Doctors said that if the dancers are out of shape or lack the flexibility of the young breakers, they could end up with severe injuries.

In the worst injury reported, a tourist, Efrain Arreola, 25, broke his neck trying a difficult stunt with no training, said Nadine Filipiak, a spokeswoman for Chicago's St. Mary of Nazareth Hospital.

Arreola, an assistant accountant in Mexico, was in Chicago visiting his brother's family for the summer. During a June 10 picnic, he saw a group of breakdancers performing and decided to join in.

Arreola told doctors that he was so happy to be with his family "he felt like jumping for joy." So he joined the dancers, and started out with a complicated move — a flip to a handstand, followed by a headspin.

Doctors say they have seen a rash of broken bones and torn ligaments caused by the fad.

"He didn't execute it right," Filipiak said. "He came down on the crown of his head, so his full body weight came down on the vertebra of his neck, and he cracked his spine."

"When he hit the ground, he became an instant quadriplegic," she said. "He will probably never walk again."

Arreola remains hospitalized in the intensive care unit.

Because the spine was not severed in the accident, there is some hope for a partial recovery but the outlook is not optimistic, St. Mary of Nazareth neurosurgeon Leslie Schaffer said.

"It's terrible, it's heartbreaking to see a kid that age," he said.

The danger involved in breakdancing "really depends on who you are," Schaffer said. "There is no way to tell who is poised for some type of injury like this."

He advised would-be breakers to "take it slowly with something like this. Approach it with a certain amount of respect — work up to it."

No statistics are kept on breakdancing injuries, so researchers are not sure how many people are injured executing the tricky moves. But doctors say they have seen a rash of broken bones and torn ligaments caused by the fad.

Dr. Herbert Schwartz, an orthopedic surgeon at the University of Chicago Hospital, said he has treated five breakdancers who broke their arms trying to support their body weight by standing on one hand.

"The wrist is not used to bearing that kind of load," Schwartz said.

Welcome Back Aggies!

This Wednesday Night, start your summer night with our special BUCK-A-RITAS.

From TEXAS TUMBLEWEED

Buck-A-Ritas by the glass $1.00
 Buck-A-Ritas by the pitcher $6.00
 And when you buy a pitcher, we'll throw in an order of nachos for $1.00

Culpepper Plaza

696-7773

Your Wedding...

- Tuxedos
- Bridal
- Bride Maids
- Mother of the Bride Groom

Ladies & Lords

900 Harvey Rd. Post Oak Village College Station
 764-8289

Open Mon.-Sat. 10am-7pm or by appointment

DON'T RENT ANY APARTMENT BEFORE YOU SEE WALDEN POND

Shuttle Bus Passes for Fall ONLY $35!

WALDEN POND is an all new luxury apartment community with extras you can't find anywhere else. Enjoy a fireplace, vaulted ceiling and ceiling fan, large walk-in closets, designer interiors, w/d conn., private balcony or terrace, and large arched windows.

one bedroom/study with spiral staircase to the loft!

There's room to explore at Walden Pond with its private lake and wooded jogging trails or enjoy the pool, 10' hot tub spa, exercise room and "Showcase" clubhouse!

Prices begin at $335. Available in one and two bedroom floorplans. Also featuring a

Developed by Guy King Enterprises Incorporated

700 FM 2818 off FM 2818 at Holleman 696-5777

Bicycle Parks & Accessories
A-1 LOCK & CYCLES
 3811 E. 29th, Bryan Town & Country Center
 Sales, Service, Parts
 260-9810

Behavior Modification Stress Diet Therapy

Pat Haberstroh, Consultant
 R.D.-Registered ADA Dietician
 L.D.-Licensed in Texas
Knowledge, Experienced, Results
 For appointment
 Phone: (409) 775-1878 All Ages

Gallery Datsun COOLING SYSTEM PRESSURE TESTING
 —Inspect all Belts & Hoses—$15⁰⁰

parts and installation of parts extra
 Ken Speaks-service manager
 1214 Texas Ave. 775-1500