

Dancin'

Drill teamers at A&M

'Step and one, two, smile, three, four, kick...OK, let's try it again.'

This is the sound being heard throughout campus this week. More than four hundred girls from 17 high schools throughout the state are here for the American Drill Team School which runs through Thursday afternoon. The school is being sponsored by the Aggie Alliance.

In addition to learning dance routines and marching drills they also receive instruction on poise, projection, motivation and self discipline. Classes are held in East Kyle, G. Rollie White Coliseum and on Kyle Field.

Although this is the first year that this school has been held at Texas A&M, the large number of participants is encouraging, said executive vice president Joyce Pennington.
