Hijackers refused asylum

United Press International

CAIRO, Egypt — The two hijackers of an Iranian jetliner appeared stranded at a military airfield Wednesday after Egypt rejected their request for asylum and the plane's crew refused to take off, political sources said.

The two, described by the Al Akhbar newspaper as Iranian military officers opposed to the Islamic regime of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, hijacked the Boeing 727 over Iran Tuesday.

They made a refuelling stop at the Gulf state of Qatar, where they released 142 passengers and crew and then flew to Cairo.

Egypt promptly rejected their request for asylum. Officials, who handled a similar hijacking of an Iranian Fokker 27 less than two weeks ago, were reported to be angry at the repetition of the incident and eager to see the plane leave.

In Paris, a French government official said his country "does not accept air piracy. It is an act of violence that is unacceptable. We do not wish to see the plane land here."

But France had the same position on the last Iranian hijacking, and eventually let it land. The four hijackers were placed under house arrest in Bordeaux.

The plane's departure was delayed further because the three crewmen were reluctant to take off without rest, the sources said.

Parent's rights reinstated

Child's word inadmissible

United Press International

AUSTIN — Uncorroborated statements by a child in a sex abuse case are inadmissible in court unless they are made immediately after an alleged incident occurs, the Texas Supreme Court said Wednesday.

The high court's ruling reinstated the parental rights of a man who had been accused by his former wife of sexually abusing their 3-year-old son during weekend visits.

In reversing a ruling by the 10th Court of Appeals in Waco, the tribunal said hearsay statements the child made to his mother, grandmother and stepfather were inadmissible, and the evidence was insufficient to affirm a jury verdict from Johnson County.

Priscilla Kay Green obtained a jury verdict terminating the parental rights of Wesley Dwight Richardson in 1982 after statements from the child indicated he may have been sexually abused.

But the Supreme Court said there was no independent corroboration of the testimony about the abuse.

"A hearsay statement by a small child may be admitted ... if ... the statement was a spontaneous utterance made under the immediate influence of an exciting event," wrote Chief Justice Jack Pope.

But Pope said the alleged abuse

"preceded the statements by several days."

"Evidence that the event could have occurred does not satisfy the requirement," the court said. "It must be sufficient to support a finding that it did occur."

The child did not testify during the trial, but the jury was shown a videotaped interview given by a caseworker for the Texas Department of Human Resources in Fort Worth.

However, the court said the videotaped interview was "highly prejudicial" because of leading questions asked by the social worker.
