Head of PUC resigns

United Press International
AUSTIN — The chairman of the Public Utility Commission, Alan Erwin, resigned Wednesday, warning consumers not to expect the commission to "insulate" them from future utility rate increases. Erwin, 39, a charter member of the three-member utility regulatory commission, formally announced his resignation in a prepared statement he read during a meeting of the panel. The former newspaper editor and author had said earlier he did not expect to complete his term, which would have expired in 1989. Gov. Mark White was notified by letter of the resignation, which is effective Friday. White reportedly is considering four candidates to replace Erwin — Dennis Thomas, a White aide; Rafael Quintanilla, director of the Texas Department of Community Affairs, and consumer lawyers Carol Barger and Don Butler. Thomas, 36, and Quintanilla, 37, are believed to have the inside track, however. White indicated he planned to fill Erwin's vacant seat on the commission next week. "I deeply regret losing a person of Al's ability, but appreciate his tireless contributions to ensure that utility bills in Texas are no higher than they absolutely have to be," said White. "I hope that we have made a positive impact on regulation at this commission," said Erwin. "I'm satisfied I have done my best in the role assigned me." Erwin said he agreed to accept the appointment by White 17 months ago because he wanted to help restore public confidence in the agency. "I think I've been fair to everyone who has appeared before us," he said. "Only time will tell whether we accomplished that goal." Erwin said the vitality of utility companies in Texas is important because of the state's rapid growth, but he said companies must learn to be more accountable. As for consumers, he said, "This commission cannot insulate the people of this state from rate increases."

Utility rates were one of the chief issues in White's 1982 gubernatorial campaign. He lobbied unsuccessfully with the Legislature to change the PUC from an appointed panel to an elected panel, but gave up the fight after he was able to appoint three new members. White picked Erwin in February 1983 to fill one of the spots created by the surprise resignations of former Commissioners George Cowden and Tommie Gene Smith, who quit to protest the governor's criticism of the agency.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals ordered a new trial for Terry Blankenship, who was sentenced in 1981 to 35 years in prison for an aggravated robbery. Miller said that Woodard's "jealous protection" of Blankenship's right to counsel unfairly denied his right to represent himself. The court, said El Paso District Judge Jerry Woodard's refusal to allow Blankenship to represent himself warranted a reversal of Blankenship's conviction.

Self-representation right upheld

United Press International
AUSTIN — The state's highest criminal appeal court, noting an exception to the proverb "He who represents himself is a fool for a client," Wednesday ruled a defendant has the right to act as his own attorney even if a judge deems he is unqualified.
