Mondale pledges arms control talks

United Press International

Walter Mondale took his foreign policy and defense plans to a political lions' den Wednesday and said if elected president he will call on the Soviet Union to join him in arms control negotiations within six months.

As Mondale spoke bluntly about the danger of nuclear war in a half-empty hall at the American Legion national convention in Salt Lake City, President Reagan told a conference in Chicago that the United States under his leadership had regained hope and moved toward restoration of old values.

The vice presidential candidates also were on the road in the middle of the first week of all-out campaigning. Rep. Geraldine Ferraro remained on the West Coast to appear with Mondale later in the day in Portland, Ore.

Campaigning in Paducah, Ky., Vice President George Bush responded to Mondale's vow to call Soviet leaders as soon as he is inaugurated, by saying, "Let him try."

Mondale said Reagan was the first president since Herbert Hoover not to meet with Soviet leaders, and added: "The issue is whether he has set on a course toward peace and a safer world. In my judgment, he has not."

Mondale said negotiations were vital for world survival — "Every day we fail to open negotiations with the Soviets is another day we slip toward Armageddon." He said if elected he would "declare a temporary moratorium and challenge the Soviets to join us."

"I am announcing now that on the very first day as president, I will call on the Soviet leadership to meet me within six months in Geneva for fully prepared, substantive negotiations to freeze the arms race and to begin cutting back the stockpiles of nuclear weapons," Mondale said.

Mondale was interrupted several times by polite applause but spoke to about half of the 7,000 delegates and guests who applauded Reagan Tuesday.

Reagan used the Chicago appearance to argue that economic recovery rather than increased taxes would reduce federal deficits, but primarily concentrated on the improvement in the national state of mind since 1980.

Four years ago, he said, "it seemed to many that America's well finally had run dry from a philosophy of bigger and bigger government."

"The worst trauma was not the breakdown in our economy or the humiliating setbacks we suffered abroad," Reagan said. "The worst thing was when they told us we couldn't get well — that the problems were just too big and government wasn't to blame, we were to blame."

"In the past few decades, many of us turned away from the enduring values — from faith, the work ethic and the central importance of the family," he said. "We had something of a hedonistic heyday, but it's passing. We've righted ourselves. Americans hadn't given up hope. We just hadn't been allowed to hope."

Ford says Texas crucial for GOP election win

United Press International

SUGAR LAND — Former President Gerald Ford said, Wednesday, that Texas is crucial to retaining Republican control of the U.S. Senate and securing President Reagan's reelection.

At a breakfast fund-raiser for first-time congressional candidate Tom DeLay, Ford urged Republicans to "maximize" DeLay's vote in the House by sending Rep. Phil Graham, R-Texas, back to Washington as a senator and re-electing Reagan.

"Control of the U.S. Senate for the next two or four years is in doubt," Ford said. "It is critically important that in the state of Texas we elect Phil Graham to retain Republican control of the Senate."

Republicans currently hold 55 Senate seats to the Democrats' 45.

"You are leaders in your community," Ford said. "You have an obligation to expand this influence, to make sure our government at the national level ... is in the hands of people with the right ideology."

"The opposition doesn't measure up," he said of Democrats. "You can't vote maybe on an issue. You have to vote yes or no."

Ford praised Reagan's economic record, saying, "On the domestic is-President Reagan has earned the right to be re-elected."

Noting that the next president will have to negotiate with the Soviet Union to reduce nuclear weapons, Ford said the country would be in a stronger position with both the B-1 bomber and MX missile.

He accused Democratic presidential challenger Walter Mondale of wanting to give up both "without getting anything in return" from the Soviets.

Ford said he hopes Reagan and Mondale will meet in two debates, and Vice President George Bush and Democrat candidate Geraldine Ferraro in one. The three had with Jimmy Carter were too much," Ford said.

In a news conference, Ford said Mondale has exploited and misinterpreted "for political purposes" Reagan's remarks concerning re-

"I would resent the organized religion with government, but that's not what President Reagan is talking about," he said.

The fundraiser netted $40,000 and $50,000 for a three-term member of the Legislature.
