Brainstorming session begins project

Students plan 'future' hospital

By KARLA K. MARTIN

2000 A.D. It's a date destined by fact, fantasized in fiction, and yet only 16 short years away.

In response to this emerging year, 30 members of the Environmental Design 403 class have starting researching and designing health care facilities to provide hospital services for the 21st Century.

This semester's project, required by Dr. George J. Mann, professor of Architecture and Environmental Design, was begun Wednesday at a brain-storming session held from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m. in 204C of the Sterling C. Evans Library.

Speakers at this session included 17 professionals from the fields of hospital administration, medicine, engineering and architecture. "I wanted a brain-storming session so we could have each student develop his own architectural solution for future health care facilities," Mann said. Mann, himself, specializes in health care facility design.

The major theme of the speeches centered on the importance of providing quality health care while at the same time maximizing space efficiency within the hospital.

Joseph G. Sprague, of the American Hospital Association, said he believes health care facilities are the most highly engineered structures.

"Efficiency is definitely a hospital's biggest design problem," Sprague said, "but there's no pat answer, everyone's got their own approach."

Grady Smith, of the U.S. Public Health Service, agreed. "Space efficiency is what it's all about," Smith said, addressing the students, "but don't forget: hospitals are designed for people, for human emotions. Just put yourself in that hospital bed."

Dr. Roger Panther, vice-president of the Hospital Corporation of America, predicted such medical innovations as small wafers that will be placed in the corner of the eye to deliver glaucoma medication for as long as a week, and a hospital spare parts department full of "biological replacements."

"It will not be unlikely to find ears, lungs, blood vessels, skin that's grown in test tubes, knees, fingers, hips, hearts, ears, tongues or kidneys available as mechanical or biological transplants," Panther said. Kurt Overmyer, a senior mental design major, said he enjoyed the presentation and thought any other school had to have in computer papers and c. They can Dickie LaSalle, also a senior, said he also enjoyed the presentation and thought any other school had to have in computer papers and c. They can

"They raised lots of questions about the health care field," LaSalle said. "We came away with a lot of information."

LaSalle explained that the Formats Division is concentrating on special projects in their projects because they are moving toward smaller, more integrated health care facilities.

"We really got a lot of information out of this session," LaSalle said. "It was extremely impressive."

Senate discusses proposal on allocation of MSC funds $50,000

By SARAH OATES
Staff Writer

A bill that would establish an executive committee to represent student interests in allocating money from the Memorial Student Center reserve fund was introduced Monday night at the Student Senate's first meeting of the semester.

Mike Kelley, vice-president of finance, said this committee would have an "advisory capacity" to represent student groups concerned with the MSC.

"Students would have a say in where the MSC fees go," he said.

The committee would consist of representatives from both student government and the MSC Council. The committee would be co-chaired by Kelley and Cory Courtney, MSC Executive vice-president for administration.

In other business, the Senate unanimously approved the dates and locations to file for freshman class elections.

Filing for freshman elections will be open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sept. 19 through Sept. 21 at the Pavilion. The elections will be from 9 a.m.

By LYNN RAE POVEC

The College Station Planning and Zoning Commission will consider four rezoning cases, five final plats and two conditional use permits at tonight's meeting.

The commission first will hear a request from the College Heights Assembly of God Church that a five-acre tract of land in the Richard Carter Survey, located on the south side of University Drive and east of East Tarrow Street, be rezoned a General Commercial District C-1. The tract is currently zoned a Single Family Residential District R-1.

The commission will consider three additional requests for rezoning:

• Brazosland Properties, Inc. wants rezoned a two-acre tract of land on the west side of Glenhaven Drive south of University Drive, from Townhouse-Rowhouse District R-3 to Administrative-Professional District A-P.

• Ronald Cruse has requested rezoning for more than two and one-half acres of land in the Lakeview Acres subdivision, at the intersection of Texas Avenue and Morgans Lane. The commission will consider changing the zoning from Administrative-Professional District A-P to General Commercial District C-1. Eastmark Partners is requesting rezoning for its one-acre land in Block B East Mark Industrial District C-2.

Aldersgate United Methodist Church, 6501 E. Highway 11, is requesting a Conditional Use District C-1 for a softball field, a playground and a daycare center at the facilities of the church.
