Big Broadway program planned for Town Hall

By LOREN STEFFY
Reporter

Five Broadway plays and several concerts top the Memorial Student Center Town Hall's calendar for the 1984-85 season.

"We have a good Broadway program and we hope to balance it with some good concerts," Town Hall Chairman Julie Plessala says.

Town Hall will present "Dracula" on Nov. 5, "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers" on Nov. 19, "Night Mother" on Jan. 29, "Brighton Beach Memoirs" on March 28 and "GiGi" on April 17. Season tickets are available at the Rudder Box Office.

Town Hall is striving for diversity in its programming, Plessala says. Rock musicians, as well as country and western musicians and comedians are among the talents Town Hall hopes to bring to Texas A&M this season. The committee is negotiating with agents of performers for the concerts.

In addition, Town Hall is putting out a survey to determine students' interests in live entertainment.

Plessala says a lot of work is involved in scheduling a concert. Results of the 500-student survey are used to make selections. The list of performances on the survey is determined by extensive research of popular acts. After being contacted, the booking of an act depends on price, availability and special requirements.

After the performance is booked, the committee does everything involved in putting on a show, from selling tickets.

MSC Town Hall is a committee of 120 to 125 members interested in bringing quality live entertainment to the University.

Commission denies request to change zoning on land

By LYNN RAE POVEC
Staff Writer

The College Station Planning and Zoning Commission denied a request Thursday night to change the zoning on a five-acre tract of land south of University Drive to General Commercial District C-1, despite several reasons the applicant cited for requesting the change.

The land, located east of the intersection of East Tarrow Street and University Drive and zoned Single Family Residential District R-1, is owned by the College Heights Assembly of God Church.

The church purchased the tract in 1975 because it intended to relocate from Bryan to College Station. Membership has since increased, and the church's pastor Calvin Durham said relocating on the tract would be impractical.

The land would be better used as a commercial property because surrounding property is commercial, he said, and because University Drive, a "main artery to Texas A&M," should not be zoned residential.

The commission unanimously denied the church's request. It then passed by a vote of 4-2 a recommendation to the College Station Council that the tract be rezoned Administrative-Professional District AP.

Commissioner Ray Martyn said rezoning the land commercial would place a higher value on it. "It would not be in the city's best interest as the land is located in the city's last major areas of lands," he said.

"I still think an R-3 or an R-1 (residential) zoning is good for the area out there," Martyn said.

Austin hopping with pesky cricket trouble

United Press International

AUSTIN — Millions of crickets in a mating frenzy have invaded Austin, including the hallowed halls of the Texas state Capitol.

although there seem to be more of the pesky insects than usual.

"They're seasonal," he said. "They're attracted at night by the lights, and they're all out right now because it's time for them to mate and lay eggs."

A spokeswoman for the Travis County Agricultural Extension Agency said her office has received nearly 100 calls from people about the crickets.

"Some guy from Bergstrom (Force Base) called and said they were everywhere," she said. "It looked like some Alfred Hitchcock movie or something."

Dr. Charles Cole, a Texas A&M University entomologist, says the cricket invasion is nothing abnormal.
