Glashow to discuss particles

By KARI FLUEGEL
 Staff Writer

Nobel laureate Dr. Sheldon Lee Glashow will discuss recent physics advances 8 p.m. tonight in Rudder Forum.

Glashow, a University Scholar here will present a lecture about "Revolutions in Particle Physics." He will be discussing how elementary particle physics has progressed to its present state, as well as where the field is going.

Glashow is the 1979 winner of the Nobel Prize in Physics for his contributions to the theory of elementary particles.

Glashow is a Higgins Professor of Physics at Harvard University. He also is an advocate for the Superconducting Super-Collider.

Glashow has been affiliated with Texas A&M for two years. Texas A&M is one of the four universities working with the governor's office and the Houston Area Research Council to have the world's largest scientific particle accelerator located in Texas.

New discoveries in particle physics have been made by European scientists, and Glashow's lecture comes at the time when American researchers want to counterbalance the European trend with the construction of an accelerator within the next five years.

Glashow also is planning to visit to Texas A&M in October. This trip is scheduled to coincide with the meeting of the College of Science Development Council. He also will visit again sometime during the spring semester.

Aggie Democrats host candidates of

By JAMES WALKER
 Staff Writer

Young Aggie Democrats gathered Monday night at the Ramada Inn to hear from several state officials and local candidates running in the November election.

Texas Land Commissioner Gary Mauro, the featured speaker, threw a few punches at Republicans and gave an account of state prosperity.

Mauro, a former yell leader and student body president at Texas A&M, caused a laughing uproar when he criticized Vice-President Bush's recent visit and his poor knowledge of Aggie tradition.

"He didn't even say Gig 'em," Mauro said.

Mauro went on to praise Texas for having "the strongest economic climate in the entire country. We are a big state, an industrial state but yet, in terms of taxes, we are 44th, pita.

Mauro said the only Republican ever representing Texas was Senator John Tower and former Governor Bill Clements.

"Anything good you say about Texas Democrats," he said.

"Republicans always want about liberal and conservatism tell you...the only way you can be the General Land Office of the State of Texas is efficiently."

Mauro also criticized Republican state representatives for opposing the Veteran's Housing Allowance Program which, according to Mauro, 8,200 veterans participate in, creating 25,000 jobs.

Other speakers included Lt. Gov. Mark White, 6th Congressional District candidate, and Neely Lewis, state representative.

Bryan raises utility rates

By ANN CERVENKA
 Reporter

The Bryan City Council Monday night unanimously approved the first reading of two ordinances which would increase the city's utility rates.

Bryan Mayor Ron Blatchley said "this is a matter that we have been discussing for months." After a public hearing on the utility rates, the council has agreed to an increase "with great reluctance."

The first ordinance would establish a new schedule of rates for electricity furnished by Bryan, establish a delayed payment charge, provide customer restored service and prescribe service charges.

The second ordinance would establish the rate schedules for water and wastewater services in Bryan.

If the ordinances are approved after the second reading, they will become effective on Oct. 1.

The council also approved the first reading of an ordinance which would increase the present tax rate from 46.35 percent to 54.2 percent.

After the second and final reading, the council adopted an ordinance revising rates for garbage and trash collections, as well as increasing fees for use of sanitary landfill.

The council also approved a resolution to increase fees for the new city-owned land at Coulter Field, not on the ones.

Carl N. Schaffhouser, president of the Coulter Field Pilots Association, said the increases in existing fees would not help airplanes. He said the fees have increased percent to 95 percent in the past months, but no improvements have been made in the airport.

HISD settles on desegregation lawsuit

United Press International

HOUSTON — The Houston Independent School District and attorneys for two minority groups Monday cleared a final hurdle over special transfers and signed an out-of-court settlement to a 28-year-old desegregation lawsuit.

Superintendent Billy Reagan, who said he is "tremendously relieved," described the five-year agreement as "90 percent educational and 10 percent political."

Implementing programs in the agreement will cost the school district more than $13 million the first year and about $10 million annually thereafter, he said.

Reagan said staff time devoted to preparing for a trial this summer and money spent on legal fees now can be devoted to educational programs. HISD staff members spent 2,000 hours this summer preparing for the trial, which was diverted Monday by the last-minute settlement. The district has spent more than $2 million in legal fees over the years, Reagan said.

The settlement still must be approved by U.S. District Judge Robert O'Connor, who has scheduled a hearing for Oct. 24 to give community groups and interested people a last chance to comment before he decides whether to approve the 19-page document.

Officials originally had announced on Aug. 30 that a settlement had been reached, but the NAACP later refused to sign the document because of wording on the transfer section.

Negotiations among attorneys for HISD, the NAACP and the Mexican American Legal Defense and Education Fund continued until last night and the school board held an emergency meeting at 11 p.m. Monday to approve complete wording on transfers.

O'Connor Thursday had scheduled the trial to keep negotiations dragging on.

"Sometimes deadlines prompt results," board attorney Kelly said of the 11th-hour settlement. He said the new wording tightens transfer policy while still retaining flexibility.
