Hearings ordered by court

United Press International

NEW ORLEANS — A federal appeals court Tuesday overturned a judge's refusal to grant relief to 17 former Natchitoches Parish deputies who were fired by newly elected Sheriff Norman Fletcher in 1980.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, citing its own change in a decision involving a similar case in Texas, ordered the federal district judge to hold further hearings on a suit brought by the 17 former deputies.

The deputies all worked for Sheriff Sam James, who decided not to seek re-election in 1980, and assisted Chief Deputy Boyd Durr in his campaign to succeed James.

The deputies donated money, painted signs, displayed bumper stickers and held a barbecue for Durr, the circuit court opinion states.

Fletcher defeated Durr in the election and fired the 17 deputies. Fourteen other deputies were retained, the opinion says.

The 17 fired deputies filed suit, claiming they were deprived of their constitutional rights to political belief and association.

But the district judge — who is not named in the circuit court opinion — threw out the suit, basing his opinion on a decision by a three-judge panel of the 5th Circuit in a similar case from Jim Hogg County, Texas.

The entire circuit court this year reversed the panel's ruling in the Texas case, leading to the call for reconsideration of the Natchitoches Parish case.

Jury hears testimony in adoption-war case

United Press International

FORT WORTH — A supervisor at the Edna Gladney adoption center testified Tuesday a 19-year-old unwed mother saw her baby a total of only 20 minutes after delivery, and willingly released custody of the infant.

"The baby was born; seven days later she signed an affidavit" handing over custody to the adoption center, said Kay Fenn, a Gladney supervisor.

Patricia Ellen Breeding claims the Gladney Home coerced her to sign away her custody rights to her daughter after she gave birth at the home on Jan. 20.

Gladney attorney William Schur counters that Breeding willingly signed the papers and that she has presented no evidence that she was coerced.

"She told nobody she wanted to keep the baby," Fenn testified. "The following day she went home to Shreveport (La.)."

State District Judge Frank Sullivan earlier this summer ordered the child placed with an adoptive couple.

Attorneys for the Gladney home asked Aug. 31 for a summary judgment against the woman, but Sullivan last Wednesday granted Breeding's request for a jury trial.

Breeding said officials at the Gladney home had given her the impression that because they assisted her during her pregnancy, she was obligated to relinquish custody.
