BEAUMONT - Cosandra Williams believes girls have prettier names than boys, and her 1-weekold daughter will be able to have her pick from 108 names in a record-set-ting first name of 1,019 letters. Their first child is named James

"I didn't think she would go through with it," car salesman James Williams, 26, said of his wife's choice for their first daughter's name. Williams, 23, said the name is made up of 108 shorter names, including the names of relatives, several cities, countries and two of her favorite automobiles.

Army demonstrates Apache anti-tank attack helicopter

HAMPTON, Va. — The Army roudly demonstrated a prototype auicker, quieter and more development, said Lt. Col. Normal development roudly demonstrated a prototype model of the Apache anti-tank attack helicopter - a new weapons systems noted for its maneuverability, 146-knot speed and quickness - on Wednesday.

Hughes Helicopters Inc. of Culver City, Calif., is scheduled to build 515 of the anti-tank aircraft that cost $7.8 million each by 1989.

Fort Rucker, Ala., will receive the first production model Apaches for training purposes in November. Others are scheduled to arrive at Fort Eustis in early 1985. The "state-of-the art" Apaches are praised for their "survivability, maintainability, and their ability to fly and fight, day or night or in ad-verse weather," Bill Cressall, a Hughes spokesman, told reporters gathered for a demonstration at the Army's training center at Fort Mon-

Special "electrical optical" equipment on board enables the pilot and co-pilot to operate the craft without having to rely on the limitations of the naked eye, Cressall said. the Apache is the destruction of tanks, it also is equipped with a 30mm gun and 2.75-inch rockets. It can travel at a speed of 146 knots and, as an aerial demonstration revealed, it is capable of aerial maneuvers airplane pilots would envy.

The Army spent $1.1 billion developing the Apache during a 12-year research and design phase. Its design led to one movie and to television programs such as "Blue Thunder" and "Airwolf."

Nearly all branches of the militan have been confronted in recent years with problems involving fault equipment or equipment-design de fects, but the Army and Hughes said they do not believe this will happen with the Apache.
