Texas A&M reserve free safety Kip Corrington dives for a ball during the Ags' practice Wednesday.

Corrington aims for A&M perfection

In this modern computer age, more and more students complain about just being just another number: I.D., board plan, driver's license number, etc.,
But sophomore Kip Corrington is a number.
Number 10.
Corrington is a reserve free-safety for the Aggies football team, but he still managed to maintain a 4.0 grade point average for two semesters.
"Because football is time consuming, I have to budget my spare time to include homework and leisure moments. Luckily, I enjoy learning so it's easy for me to apply myself to classes and homework," Corrington said.

During his four years at A&M Consolidated High School, Corrington participated in football, basketball, track, and baseball. As a senior, Corrington knew he would have to concentrate on one sport to obtain a scholarship. Corrington chose football because he knew he could play football better than any other sport. He also wanted to return to his first love.
Corrington graduated from A&M Consolidated with an A average and he was offered a football scholarship to Texas A&M University.

But because of the football program at A&M and the school's reputation for academic excellence, I chose A&M hands down."

Corrington's typical day consists of morning classes followed by afternoon workouts. From 2 until 7:00 p.m., he watches films, attends game meetings, and goes to football practice. Nights are devoted to homework and preparing for the next day's classes.

Although the Athletic Department provides tutors in all subjects, it's up to the athletes to take advantage of this system," he said.
As a general studies major, Corrington is enrolled in such courses as history and english. He's fulfilling basic core requirements before choosing his major. Corrington plans on combining his love of sports with whatever subject he chooses to pursue.

Since Corrington is expected to see more play time in the 1984 season, the possibility of not maintaining his 4.0 grade point average has occurred to him. But since Corrington believes taking different subjects is more important than the grade, he would settle for a 3.8.

"Since I live in College Station," Corrington said, "I had thought of attending a university away from home, and had even received scholarships from TCU, Rice, and UT.

Corrington credits the A&M football coaching staff with stressing the importance of excelling in academics.

"Football takes up a lot of time and sometimes classes can be ne-
