the movie directed by Richard Sarafian.

"I went to a press conference where Mr. Busey was speaking and I swear that if I closed my eyes I would have thought it was Coach Bryant talking," Taylor said.

"I watched him at the game when they were filming last year and he had a lot of the mannerisms down, but the way he does the voice is incredible," he added. Busey studied films of Bryant to get command of the voice and movements.

"I think the movie will reflect favorably on the University," Taylor said. "But I wonder how true in a sense it will be.

"First of all, I don't know if it will be a high enough caliber movie — for him. He was such a great, great man.

"Second, it was my understanding that they didn't have a very large budget — a lot of the filming was done in California."

Some of the shots will be familiar to A&M students — a yell practice, bonfire and of course, the A&M football game. After all, that's what the man was famous for.

"I'll have to see it," Taylor said. "For me it will be entirely different because I knew him and I knew the real situations. Either it will be a super movie or a complete failure.

"I guess for someone not involved, it could be a really terrific movie — but I'll have to look at it differently."

Taylor loaned two jerseys from his football days to the movie production crew so they could make duplicates for the film. He also found lockers from the '50s lockerroom for the movie.

"I wanted to help to make it as realistic as possible," Taylor said.

Taylor recalled a story about Bryant:

"One time my wife asked Coach Bryant how long he planned to go on coaching.

"He answered her like this, 'First of all I don't have enough money to retire.' Well, of course he was very wealthy.

"And second, I'll go on as long as I'm able to — the minute I'm no longer able I'll fire myself."

"He felt he had the best team he'd ever had during his last year but when they came out eight and four for the season he was broken hearted.

"He said, 'Football is my life. If I ever have to give it up — I'll croak within six weeks.'"

Bryant coached and won his last game for the University of Alabama in the Liberty Bowl on December 29, 1982. He died one month later.

"He was a great man and a great developer of men," Taylor said.
