Attorney urges: Use your rights

By MARYBETH ROHSNER
Reporter

"You have the right to remain silent. Anything you say can and will be used against you in a court of law..."

Everyone has heard a television policeman recite those familiar words while making an arrest. Criminals, however, are not the only people who must be concerned with legal rights.

Anyone ignorant of arrest procedures can talk his way into serious trouble — even if he is involved in a traffic accident.

"Many people are misinformed about their rights," Bryan Attorney Hank Paine said. "There is no requirement that any officer read you your rights at any time unless you're going to be interrogated while under arrest."

"You are considered under arrest when you're effectively detained from leaving the scene. Any information you volunteer may be used at your trial, even if you haven't been read your rights."

Paine offers the following advice to anyone involved in legal problems:

- Don't leave the scene until the police get there. Write down the names, addresses and phone numbers of all witnesses. Your attorney may need to contact the witnesses later.

- Stay calm and don't discuss what happened with anyone. Comments such as "I just didn't see him" or "I only had one beer" will damage you in court.

- When an officer arrives, give him your name, address, driver's license number and insurance papers. Cooperate, but do not make a statement about the incident until you've talked with a lawyer. Let the witnesses make the statements.

- Don't let the officer talk you into making a statement by promising you a more favorable report with the prosecutor. No matter how much he wants to help you, the officer has no authority in the prosecutor's decisions.

- Should you decide to discuss the incident with the officer, you have waived your right to remain silent. However, you may still end questioning at any time.

- Contact a lawyer as soon as possible. If you can't afford a lawyer, one will be provided.

Okla. detective tried to stop sex offender

United Press International

TUCSON, Ariz. — An Oklahoma detective tried unsuccessfully to revoke the parole of a California sex offender two weeks before the kidnapping of an Arizona girl, a Tucson newspaper said Wednesday.

Frank J. Atwood, 26, a Los Angeles County resident, was arrested Sept. 20 in Kerrville for the abduction of Vicki Lynn Hoskinson, 8, who disappeared from a suburban Tucson street.

The girl's bicycle was found abandoned Sept. 17. A massive air and ground search in the desert near Tucson was unsuccessful.

Randy West, a detective with the Enid, Okla., police department, said he tried to warn law enforcement agencies in Tucson Aug. 30 that Atwood might become involved in a child molestation.

Court documents said Atwood, who was visiting in Enid, told a police informant he was seeking a child with whom he could have sex.

California failed to respond to the request that Atwood be picked up,

West said in the Tucson Citizen.

West's request for arrest was considered invalid because Arizona officials believed Atwood was back in Los Angeles. He wasn't.

In Sacramento, Robert Gore, a state corrections spokesman, said it was not until Sept. 13 that parole officials realized Atwood was out of the state.

A parole revocation warrant retroactive to Sept. 13 was issued Sept. 21, one day after Atwood was arrested in Texas.

Atwood remains in custody in Bastrop County facing extradition to Tucson.

In California, Atwood served three years of a five-year prison term for kidnapping a 7-year-old boy whom he assaulted sexually.

A court affidavit by a Pima County detective indicates that on the day Vicki disappeared, witnesses spotted Atwood with a bloody shirt, bloody hands and a knife, and said he had acknowledged being involved in a stabbing.

Police beat

The following incidents were reported to the University Police Department through Wednesday.

MISDEMEANOR THEFT:

- A red Schwinn Varsity 10-speed bicycle was stolen from in front of the Blocker Building.

- A red Sears Free Spirit 10-speed bicycle was stolen from the bike racks at the corner of South Bizzell and Lubbock Streets.

- A silver Schwinn LeTour 10-speed bicycle was stolen from the south side of Heldenfels Hall.
