Texas police seize prisoners from Arkansas

United Press International
LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Police in Texas captured two Arkansas prisoners Sunday following their early morning escape from a work-release center near the Arkansas-Texas border.

Donald Hargrove, 22, and Daniel Petty, 25, were reported missing about 3:30 a.m. Sunday following a bed check at the Texarkana Regional Correctional Center, where they had been assigned to perform maintenance and landscaping work in and around public buildings, David White, a spokesman for the Arkansas Corrections Department, said.

Greenville, Texas, police spotted the men about 9 a.m. in a car matching the description of one reported stolen from a home in Texarkana, which straddles the borders of both states.

Police began to chase them, and the driver of the car lost control, swerved off a road and came to a stop, White said. The two inmates, who were not injured, and an unidentified female companion, were taken to the city jail in Greenville.

"Obviously, there was a security breakdown," White said about the escape. An investigation was under way later Sunday to determine how the men escaped the minimum security building that also houses city and police departments.

The prisoners were to be returned to Arkansas later Sunday.

Petty was serving a seven-year sentence for theft from Miller County. He had been imprisoned in May 1984 and was to have been eligible for parole in July 1985.

Hargrove, who was serving a nine-year prison sentence for various theft convictions from Garland County, was to have been eligible for parole in January 1986. Hargrove was imprisoned in February 1980.

Protestors shout at Klan

United Press International

MERIDEN, Conn. — A dozen white-robed members of the Ku Klux Klan rallied Sunday on a baseball field with lines of riot-ready police separating them from protestors who shouted "Put the sheets back on the bed."

State police said 145 people passed through a search point to attend the rally at Ceppa Field while about 20 demonstrators gathered on an adjacent street and chanted "Death to the Klan."

A smaller group of protestors entered the field and heckled the Klan, but no weapons were confiscated and there were no arrests or serious incidents, police said.

Protestors shouted down a speech by Bill Wilkinson, imperial wizard of the Louisiana-based Invisible Empire of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan. The protestors sang songs and chanted the word "shame."

The Klan has held a series of marches and rallies in the small industrial city in central Connecticut.

It was the third Klan event of the weekend, following a demonstration Saturday in New London at the launching of a new Trident submarine and at a rally and cross-burn-later that night in East Windsor.

The Klan said it would rally again Sunday night on private property in East Windsor where leaders said those attending could "shake hands with the Klan."

Edwin G. Thrall, a self-proclaimed constitutionalist, accused of firing shots over police and sheriff's several years ago, said he led his East Windsor tobacco field to the Klan for $1 because of a six-year dispute with town officials over a dam hall Thrall built.
