Democrat Dan Kubiak

Vows for education

By JAMES WALKER
Staff Writer

Endorsements continue to roll in for Democrat Dan Kubiak, candidate for the 6th Congressional seat. Last week Hugh Palmer, a challenger in the primary race, pledged his support for the 14-year veteran of the Texas legislature.

At a Tuesday morning press conference in College Station, Texas A&M Regent Clyde Wells endorsed Kubiak. Texas State Teacher's Association President Becky Brooks also announced her organization's support for Kubiak.

"We feel that Mr. Kubiak has been an exemplary model of what can be done for public education in our state House of Representatives, and we would very much like to see him in Congress," Brooks said.

Asked what teachers will expect if Kubiak is elected, she said Kubiak supports the proposed American Defense Education bill that would invite individual school districts to submit applications for project funding to improve instruction in math and sciences.

Clyde Wells said he respects Kubiak.

"I think that he is conservative," Wells said. "I have worked with him through the years. We have found him to be tough with those committees we had to work with."

Kubiak said his parents never graduated from high school, but he and his two brothers have doctoral degrees.

"I have personally seen what education does do," Kubiak said. "Without a good solid education system, this country would not be as great as it is now."

Kubiak made a contrast between his support of education and his challenger Joe Barton's "embrace" of the Grace Commission.

Calling the educational provisions of the Grace Commission report "dis-Grace," Kubiak said it will offer opportunities for students to receive higher education.

"In the student loan program the Texas want to double administrative costs," Kubiak said, "going from 5 percent to 10 percent of whatever you receive." He added that the report also proposes cutting 1.5 million students from federal loan programs.

Kubiak repeated his position that "education is a state and local issue."

"Any measure we pass, whether Austin or Washington, we should send dollars to pay for them," Kubiak said. "And I would like to see model schools set up so that ideas that work can be passed on to each of the 1,100-plus school districts in Texas as well as the districts in the other 49 states."

Barton discusses Kubiak's record; points out differences in platform

By JAMES WALKER
Staff Writer

Political rhetoric took a back seat Tuesday as Joe Barton, Republican candidate for Congress systematically critiqued his opponent's voting record as a Texas legislator.

Speaking in Rudder Tower to students and reporters, Barton labeled challenger Dan Kubiak as a "convenient conservative" while calling himself a "committed conservative."

Barton said Kubiak voted for the proposed Equal Rights Amendment in the state legislature, supported it in the primary, but recently indicated opposition to the amendment on a questionnaire from a citizens group in Montgomery County.

Pointing out discrepancies between Kubiak's voting record and campaign platform, Barton said, "When he had a chance to vote on taxes in the state legislature he voted for a tax increase."

Barton presented voting records showing Kubiak's opposition to a freeze on property tax and a reduction of that tax in 1977. In addition, he cited an instance in which his opponent voted not to table a corporate profits tax proposal.

Regarding education, Barton said, "I am as concerned about good, basic public education as he is."

He added that Kubiak voted against a bill requiring high school students to pass a minimum basic skills test before graduation, for mandatory bilingual education up to sixth grade and for a bill allowing illegal immigrants in the public school system.

"Let's make them learn English, and go to school in English," Barton said.

Barton contrasted his support of constitutional amendment to allow voluntary prayer in public schools with his opponent's record. Kubiak simply voted "present" when a bill for a silent meditation program came before the state legislature in 1974.

In response to Kubiak's assertion Tuesday morning that the Grace Commission report was a "dis-Grace," Barton rebutted, "Nobody could beled that their findings are more rate as to the amount of money that can be saved if the recommendations are implemented."

Concerning the report's advice to reduce student loans, Barton said, "Those students who need it should receive it, but we need to be sure that they are eligible and pay back at a fair rate of interest and in a timely fashion."

Asked if he had any original ideas, Barton responded, "I guess my original idea I have come up with that ... if I tell you I am going to do something I'll vote for it."

Trial begins for mother who hid son from 'avowed homosexual' father

United Press International

SAN DIEGO — The contempt trial of Betty Lou Batey opened Tuesday, raising the curtain on a custody battle between the fundamentalist Christian woman and the homosexual father of her 13-year-old son.

Batey, 39, faced 468 counts of contempt, one for each day that she kept her son, Brian Batey, away from his father, the legal custodian. The father, Frank Batey, 39, of Palm Springs, Calif., is an avowed homosexual. If convicted on all counts, Mrs. Batey could receive a sentence of more than 2,000 days in jail.

Custody, which originally went to the mother when the couple divorced, was switched to the father by a San Diego court in 1982 on grounds the mother was denying the father his visitation privileges. During a weekend visit in 1982, Betty Lou Batey took off with Brian.

She surrendered in Denver in April 1984 and voluntarily returned to San Diego to face the contempt counts plus a felony child-stealing charge and to wage the custody fight for Brian.

The court placed the boy in a San Diego County foster home, pending outcome of the custody dispute.

Superior Court Judge Judith McConnell has ruled that any court appearances by Brian will be closed to the public and media on grounds that media exposure he has received so far, including an interview on national television, has not been in his best interest.

Mrs. Batey has said she and Brian spent most of their time on the run with members of her Pentecostal church in Houston. The Pentecostal Church holds that homosexuality is a sin.

Maurice R. Gordon, Mrs. Batey's pastor at Lovingway United Pentecostal Church in Denver, confirmed that her supporters are seeking new attorney for the boy, Brian, to replace Dan Hunter of San Diego, who was appointed by court.

Betty Lou Batey's supporters have been distributing fliers with a picture of Brian beneath the words "trayed." The fliers carry the address of Gordon's church in Denver, and assert that "two court-appointed attorneys, Dan Hunter, Brian's attorney (and) Dr. Russell God, psychologist... appear to be part of a conspiracy to deprive Brian... of his due and right to live with his mother."

Mock election held today

The MSC Political Forum will hold a mock election today from 7:30 a.m. to 4:15 p.m.

Tables will be set up in Sbsa, the Commons, Zachry and the MSC.

Students will be given a scantron sheet and a ballot with a list of the candidates.

Students can vote for president and vice-president of the United States, U.S. senator, U.S. house representative, and state house representative. They also can vote on the Proposition 2 constitutional amendment.

Maps of the polling places and precincts for the upcoming general election will be available at the voting locations.
