

Arkansas' Hogs pull an 'Aggie' in Austin

This past weekend I forsook the Aggies to attend the Arkansas-Texas game in Austin.

As a transfer student from Hog country, I felt I should cheer on the Razorbacks. For not only were they playing the No. 4 team in the nation, but the Hogs were playing only hours away from College Station.

Of course it rained last Saturday, so my friends suggested we stay home and catch the game on the radio. After all, the Razorbacks didn't have a prayer against the Horns. Why sit in the pouring rain to watch a one-sided match?

After promising to leave my Razorback hat with the pig snout in the car and not "calling the Hogs" (wooo pig sooie) too loud, we borrowed umbrellas and left.

Maybe I went a little overboard in showing my Hog spirit by wearing a white blouse, red vest, and white striped shorts and a large red bow in my hair. But the Horns in orange didn't have to shoot those glaring looks at me.

The water-soaked seats only added to my discomfort during the first quarter. I must admit, I was embarrassed for the Arkansas offense, especially quarterback Brad Taylor. He simply couldn't complete any crucial passes. Didn't Taylor realize we're the guys in the white jerseys, not the orange?

Since I had never been to a Texas game, I hadn't realized what bad sports the Longhorn fans were — whether their team is winning or losing. The cheerleaders exhibited un-sportsmanlike behavior by making their obnoxious yells through a loud speaker. I thought I was attending a high school game.

During the second quarter, after Arkansas had finally scored a field goal, Horn fans actually had the nerve to scream that the kick was wide-to-the-left. And, that the Razorbacks were cheaters. I felt like I was at a Yankee baseball game; I exobscurities at the Razorback players and giving me dirty looks. I couldn't understand what she was getting so riled up about. Of course, it couldn't have anything to do with the fact that after the touchdown I did a tootouch, waved my hands high in the air, and repeated "Did you see that?"

It was so quiet that you could hear the cracking of a peanut shell.

Was there time for a comeback? After the Razorbacks had scored again and connected for the two-point conversion, I was dying. They could come from behind and beat this No. 4 team.

I wish I had had a camera at that moment. The facial expressions of the Texas fans were priceless. They looked as if someone had just announced the burning of 6th Street.

The final 20 seconds lasted at least 15 minutes. Arkansas had the ball and was within touchdown range. My stomach was in knots. Penalties pushed the Hogs back to the 22-yard line with one last play. Everyone was standing and screaming. I was sitting and praying for a miracle.

But alas, the upset I had envisioned, simply was not meant to be. I walked away from the game with my head held high though. Arkansas wasn't supposed to score a point, much less defeat the mighty Longhorns. A margarita from Jorge's after the game, was a necessity.

I really want to see the Texas Longhorns beg for mercy — eventually. The Hogs were only three yards away from a major upset this year.

I guess you could say Arkansas pulled an "Aggie" at the goal line in Austin.

pected to hear, "Kill the umpire" at any moment.

By the third quarter it had stopped raining and the Razorbacks were actually moving the ball. Although the Longhorns scored another touchdown, I still believed the Hogs could make a spectacular last quarter comeback. After all, the Aggies had done it in pre-Southwest Conference games.

Fourth quarter and we're behind 21-3. Who's that quarterback for Arkansas, the one completing passes? No. 16 — that's Taylor's number. Old Taylor's back in the game. Now this is how the game should have been played from the first kick-off.

Oh, no, Texas scored a field goal. OK, I'm mad too Eddie. I didn't come all this way to see my team humiliated. I could have stayed in College Station to see that.

A few plays later, Texas is first and goal on the 1. Dear God, what a massacre. My UT friends are poking me, grinning a Cheshire Cat grin.

But wait. A Texas player went over the goal. Was it a touchdown? No, a fumble and the Razorbacks recovered. Way to go Hogs. Why was I the only one in my section jumping up and down?

Taylor and Co. marched down field to score one for the fans. The girl behind me began hollering

Sutcliffe wins Cy Young

United Press International

NEW YORK — Rick Sutcliffe, the bearded right-hander whose 16-1 record propelled the Chicago Cubs to a division title, was unanimously named winner of the National League's Cy Young Award Tuesday by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

The 6-foot-7 pitcher became only the third player in the club's history to win the award and easily outdistanced rookie Dwight Gooden of the New York Mets in the balloting of 24 members of the BBWAA — two from each NL city.

Sutcliffe was named first on all 24 ballots cast by the voting members of the BBWAA and is only the fourth pitcher ever to be unanimously selected. The others were Sandy Koufax (1963, 1965, 1966), Bob Gibson (1968) and Steve Carlton (1972, 1977).

"I'm kind of nervous about it all," Sutcliffe said. "It was a lot easier facing the Mets and Padres than it was facing all these cameras."

The writers were asked to name three pitchers on their ballots. Five points were awarded for a first-place vote, three for a second and one for a third.

Gooden, who had a 17-9 record and a major league leading 276 strikeouts, had 12 second-place votes and nine for third for 45 points — 75 behind Sutcliffe.

Following in the voting were Bruce Sutter of the St. Louis Cardinals with 33 1/2 points; Joaquin Andujar of the Cardinals, the league's only 20-game winner, with 12 1/2; Rich Gossage of the San Diego Padres with 3 and Mario Soto of the Cincinnati Reds with 2.

"It's an honor for me to finish up that high, especially when you look at all the great pitchers who were up there with me," Gooden said. "Sure I'd be like to have won, but I'm very, very satisfied with second especially since I wasn't even on the roster at this time last year. Finishing second to someone like Rick Sutcliffe is quite an honor."

After coming to the Cubs in a June trade with the Cleveland Indians, Sutcliffe was practically unbeatable for the Cubs. He won 16 of his 17 decisions, including a season-closing 14 consecutive victories, and finished with a combined mark of 20-6.

Sutcliffe suffered his only loss for the Cubs when he was beaten 2-1 by the Los Angeles Dodgers June 29. He was 9-0 against NL East teams.

The Cubs' NL East title was their first of any kind since 1945. The only other Cubs to win the Cy Young Award were Ferguson Jenkins in 1971 and reliever Bruce Sutter in 1979.

Sutcliffe is the fourth pitcher in major-league history to win 20 games in a season divided between two teams. Hank Borowy of the 1945 Cubs and New York Yankees was the last to do it and his predecessors were Pat Flaherty of the Chicago White Sox and Pittsburgh Pirates in 1904 and Joe McGinnity of the Baltimore Orioles and New York Giants in 1902.

NFL stars sidelined by injuries

United Press International

The NFL has lost two of its most exciting players for the rest of the season because of knee injuries.

Tight end Kellen Winslow of the San Diego Chargers and running back Bill Sims of the Detroit Lions suffered severe injuries Sunday. Both are sidelined for the year and with them could go their teams' chances for playoff berths.

Winslow was injured catching a pass during the fourth quarter of a 44-37 loss to the Los Angeles Raiders. The injury may end the career of the prolific receiver.

Dr. Gary Losse, the Chargers team physician, said there were tears in the right knee of the medial collateral and posterior cruciate ligaments.

"In other words the torn ends looked like spaghetti," he said. "He'll never regain 100 percent of the knee. The best we can hope for is for it to return to 95 percent."

Winslow, in his sixth pro season, leads the league in receptions with 55 for 663 yards. For his career, Winslow has caught 399 passes for 5,176 yards.

Sims underwent right knee surgery Monday and doctors said he would recover fully. He injured the knee in the third quarter of Detroit's 17-16 victory over Minnesota. The former Oklahoma All-America had gained 103 yards for his fourth straight 100-yard game when he was hurt. Sims has 687 yards for the season and a career total of 5,106.

"Sims is expected to be at full strength by next spring and the recovery will be complete," said orthopedic surgeon Dr. Robert Teitze after the midnight surgery. "A piece of loose cartilage was removed and two torn ligaments were repaired."

Pittsburgh Steelers quarterback David Woodley received some good news — X-rays of his lower right leg are negative. He was hurt scrambling during the third quarter of a 17-16 loss to Indianapolis. He was twice sidelined this season with mild concussions.
