Ceremony honors Vietnam mothers

United Press International

TYLER — Somehow it seemed appropriate. A gray, cold day would represent memories of relatives from a gray, cold war.

Gold star mothers whose sons and daughters were killed in the Vietnam War were honored Sunday, as were the exploits of American servicemen who died in the southeast Asian war.

American flags, flowers and hand-written personal remembrances of loved ones adorned the black plexiglass wall of the 250-foot Vietnam memorial replica in Tyler's Bergfeld Park. Teenagers not old enough to remember the pains of the war posed with family members.

Years of disgrace for the Vietnam veterans and the families whose sons and daughters died in the war were pushed aside Sunday, hopefully for the last time, said area gold star mothers who attended the ceremonies.

Catherine Johnson, of Grand Saline, whose son, Staff Sgt. Alvin Lee Shadwick, was killed in Vietnam in February 1969 said a decade has made a difference in the public's perception of Americans who served in that war.

"They were treated like a bunch of people on marijuana and were told they had no business being there," Johnson explained.

"Today, though, is wonderful. They (society) are beginning to recognize them and it's long overdue." Helen Howell, of Tyler, whose son, Staff Sgt. Randall Howell, was killed in August 1966 after 7 years service in Vietnam, said although she wanted her son home, she knew what he wanted to do was right.

"Since my son volunteered and went, he certainly had a right to go," Powell said. "He felt he was protecting his nation. I just wanted him home, but that's natural, I guess."

For some, though, the pain of the longest war in American history and the losses sustained because of that war continue.

"I thought my son was so perfect and so valuable that nothing or anyone could put a price on his life, even though he paid the supreme price," said Vera J. Williams, mother of Gayle Edward Williams, who died in November 1969.

"I feel his loss and it is great. It still hurts," she added. "And the longer I live the longer it will hurt more and more."

She said many young people today remind her of Gayle.

"When I see young boys fishing, I see my boy because he was very athletic," Williams explained. "He played hard and he died hard."

Williams said American mothers should fight to keep their children from dying in similar circumstances.

"It's time for us American mothers to say, 'You can' have my son.' American mothers should say I should have an explanation first," she said. "I need to be the one who says yes or no."

At the ceremonies, a large gold star was presented to Kathryn Thomas, president of Gold Star Mothers Assn. of Texas, its recognition of all mothers whose children died in Vietnam.

Afterwards, an estimated 45 gold star mothers received small gold stars, and put them by the names of their children.

Selection for bench criticized

United Press International

HOUSTON — The Harris County Republican chairman Wednesday criticized Gov. Mark White for appointing to a judgeship a man who pleaded guilty to driving while intoxicated and been sued by the State of Texas for non-payment of a student loan.

The GOP's Russ Mather alleged that Houston attorney W. Burnett faces a federal tax lien more than $45,000.

Burnett was not immediately available to comment on Mather's statement.

"Mark White must have made appointment of Jay W. Burnett, the 351st District Court in Harris County blindfolded and without regard to the man's past record," Mather said.

Mather added that the man appointed should be someone who had good examples.

Mather made the statement in support of Republican Al Price, who is running against Burnett in next month's general election.

Burnett pleaded guilty to DWI in Harris County in January 1980, served a one-year probation, Mather said.

2 prison wardens leaving

United Press International

ROSHARON — The warden of an assistant warden of Darrington Unit of the state prison system where four inmates have been stabbed to death this year, has signed effective Nov. 1.

"There must be better ways to earn a living," Warden William Stricklin said.

"I've been thinking I had to make a choice between my private life being a warden," he said. "What should be paid more for all that they have to put up with."

The 40-year-old warden joined the Texas Department of Corrections as a guard in 1972, he will seek private employment.

Assistant Warden D.R. Stricklin will become the agriculture manager at the Retrieve Unit near Angleton.

TDC spokesman Phil Gaultner said the transfer was made after Stricklin, 35, asked for an assignment with less pressure. Stricklin's salary was cut from $34,020 to $21,480.

Guthrie said a new warden and assistant warden will be named in a few days.

About 1,900 Darrington inmates have been confined to cells except for one daily trip to a dining room. The confinement began Oct. 14 when an inmate was found stabbed to death in a shower.

"Our main concern is the safety of the inmates right now," Assistant Warden Norman E. McClure said.

A search of the unit following the slaying uncovered more than 100 handmade weapons, he said.

Auto insurance rates down

United Press International

AUSTIN — The State Board of Insurance unanimously approved a 3.8 percent reduction in Texas automobile premiums Wednesday, rejecting the insurance industry's request for a 5.5 percent increase.

After a daylong hearing, the three-member board approved the new rates effective Feb. 1, 1985. The 3.8 percent reduction was suggested by the board.

Depending on the area of the state, its number of accidents and the cost of repairs, yearly savings to Texas policy holders will range from $4 to $94 for drivers of low- to mid-priced automobiles that carry standard coverage.

"With this decision, the companies writing private passenger auto insurance will still get a 16.9 percent average return on their net worth," board spokesman Jon Ford said.

"They've had fewer accidents and fewer fatalities and they're also making a lot of money on their investments, so a reduction in the premiums doesn't necessarily mean they're not going to continue making money," Ford added.

Industry officials asked for a 5.5 percent hike to follow last year's increase of 3.9 percent.

"I think it is a setback," Rick Gentry of the Insurance Information Institute said of the board's ruling. "I'm a little hesitant to characterize it as a major setback. We feel we made the most compelling case today."

Examples of new premium costs under the new rates are based on $30,000 bodily injury coverage, $15,000 property damage coverage, $5,000 personal injury protection, $50 deductible comprehensive coverage and $200 deductible collision coverage.

In Houston, the maximum available yearly premium will drop $754 to $702 and in Dallas the will decrease from $608 to $575.

The only increases will be in Harris County, where rates will rise $28, and in Waller County, where a $2 increase will take effect.

Other reductions include: Antonio, $4; Fort Worth, $3; Paso, $8; Bowie County, $11; Arillo, $13; Starr, Hidalgo and Erion counties, $11; Austin, Midland and Odessa, $11; Plano, $10.
