Young pianist credited with awards to be featured with local symphony

The Brazos Valley Symphony Orchestra performs its first concert of the 1984-85 season tonight at A&M Consolidated High School. The featured pianist will be 16-year-old Ossie Borosh.

"I don't really get nervous playing in front of a lot of people," Borosh said at a rehearsal Tuesday night. "It gets me on edge when I perform in front of a crowd, but I wouldn't call it nervous."

Borosh is no babe in the woods when it comes to playing in front of crowds.

In addition to performing as a guest artist at the Japan American Society of Dallas last spring, she recently played with the Baylor Symphony and was a guest performer at Texas Christian University April 1.

Borosh also was the tape audition winner in the National Concerto Competition, sponsored in Chicago last February by Seventeen Magazine and General Motors.

"I started playing in College Station when I was six," Borosh said. "My parents bought my sister a piano and I began playing it."

"At the beginning, I played most of the pieces by ear, but eventually got a teacher."

Last August, Borosh moved with her family to the Philadelphia area where she now studies in nearby Baltimore with the world-renowned concert pianist Leon Fleisher.

In addition to studying with Fleisher, Borosh, a junior in high school, stays busy doing homework.

"I am taking several classes at school right now including calculus, chemistry and French," Borosh said. "It takes a lot of perseverance and hard work to practice on the piano and keep up with my homework."

One of the pieces Borosh will be playing is Beethoven's Cadenza No. 3. She is using a Steinway piano.

A cadenza is a piano solo in concerto.

"My favorite composer is Beethoven," Borosh said. "My favorite brand of piano is Steinway, they tend to have good action."

The symphony starts at 8 p.m. in the A&M Consolidated High School Auditorium. Tickets can be purchased at the door for $6, $5 for students and senior citizens.

Mr. Hill resigned from law enforcement 4 1/2 years ago due to personal pressures and after receiving an overwhelming vote of "no confidence" by the Police Officers Association.

Of the two candidates for sheriff, only Ron Miller is capable of taking office and leading the department effectively. He works with local agencies, knows current operating procedures, and is seriously dedicated to his career. We know we can depend on him.

Come to Matamoros for dinner.

Imagine dining on a veranda overlooking the ocean, a cool Mexican breeze blowing in your face. Taste guacamole with just the right amounts of tomato and lemon, and enchiladas so full of melted cheese that they are about to explode. Feast upon tamales, spicy tacos, rice and of course, frijoles. Now you could go to coastal Mexico for these delicacies. Or you can come to Matamoros Night at the Padre Cafe.
