

FBI arrests five suspects, loses another

United Press International

CLEVELAND — Five accused revolutionaries, one of whom has been on the FBI's Most Wanted List for seven years, were in custody Monday and authorities searched northeast Ohio for another man believed to be a member of the group.

The six are suspects in a string of violent crimes, including the 1981 slaying of a New Jersey state trooper, a dozen bombings and a series of armored car and bank heists.

Police raided a farmhouse Monday in an attempt to capture Thomas Manning, 38, of Boston, who also is on the FBI's 10 Most Wanted List. But he apparently fled shortly before authorities arrived.

"We hit the house and nobody was there," FBI spokesman John Dunn said.

The five arrested, who authorities charge are members of the Sam Melville-Jonathan Jackson Unit, were scheduled to appear before a U.S. magistrate later Monday for a bond hearing.

The group takes its name from radical Jonathan Jackson, who died in a 1970 shootout in a San Raphael, Calif., courthouse, and radical Sam Melville, ring leader of a Weathermen-affiliated group who died in the Attica, N.Y., prison uprising in 1971.

Among the five suspects was Raymond Luc Leveseur, 38, of Sanford, Maine, who has been on the FBI's Most Wanted List since 1977 and was identified as a member of the gang.

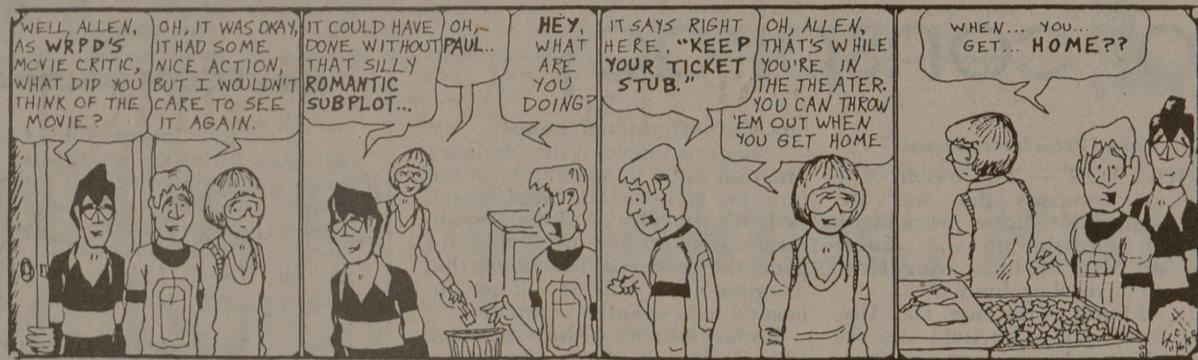

Leveseur was wanted for bank robbery and unlawful interstate flight. Gros was charged with harboring a fugitive.

Also arrested Sunday were Richard Charles Williams, 38, of Beverly, Mass., wanted by the FBI for unlawful flight to avoid prosecution for the murder of New Jersey State Trooper Philip Lamonaco; Jaan Karl Laaman, 35, a West German native, wanted for unlawful flight after a 1982 shootout with Massachusetts state police; and Barbara J. Courzi, 26, charged with harboring fugitives.

Williams, Laaman and Courzi were arrested without incident in Cleveland, and Leveseur and Gros were arrested after police pulled them over as they drove near Deerfield, about 40 miles southeast of Cleveland.

Sheriff: Guilty in drug case

United Press International

PECOS - The sheriff of Hudspeth County pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court Monday to conspiracy to distribute marijuana and possession of the drug.

Federal attorneys dropped 10 other federal drug charges against Mike Armstrong, the 38-year-old lawman who was arrested in September in Sierra Blanca by agents of the FBI.

Armstrong waived a jury trial in his noon appearance before U.S. district Judge Lucius Bunton.

Sentencing phase of Armstrong's trial will be Nov. 26. Attorney said the former lawman could get up to 10 years in prison on the two counts and could be fined up to $30,000.

Monday's testimony centered on Armstrong's dealings with an FBI plant, James Curtis Newsom. Agents testified Armstrong took marijuana from the Sheriff's Department evidence room on Aug. 14, 1984 and sold it to Newsom.
